U.S. Reported Asked to Join British, Back China Dollar

Breakdown Threatens Anglo-Japan Talks On Demands Support Of Money Be Halted

British Proposals

By International News Service

London, Aug. 1.—Great Britain has suggested that the United States co-operate with the British government and the Dominions in a powerful coalition supporting the Chinese currency of Gen. Chiang Kai-shek against Japan, it was learned tonight.

The suggestion was made in the interest of maintaining trade in China effecting Britain, the Dominions and America.

Britain has also notified the United States that it plans to follow the recent action of Washington by denouncing the Anglo-Japanese commercial treaty of 1911, if the present British negotiations in Tokyo break down and if anti-British demonstrations continue in the Far East.

London has informed Washington that Britain does not intend to recognize the Japanese controlled currency of North China and will continue to stand behind the Chunking (Chinese) dollar.

Japan, in the Anglo-Japanese talks at Tokyo, has demanded recognition of the North Chinese currency and withdrawal of British support of the generalissimo's currency.

Breakdown Threatened

Sir Robert Leslie Craigie was instructed to inform Japan that Great Britain is not prepared to agree to such demands. As a result, it was believed the Anglo-Japanese negotiations are threatened with a check-up which probably will raise international tension in the Far East to a new high point.

The French government, too, is maintaining close contact with Britain and the United States, and it was expected that the British government would not make any decision regarding Japan's demand without prior consultation with the United States and France.

The foreign office today denied reports in Tokyo newspapers to the effect that Britain has recognized Japanese claims to silver speci deposited by the Chinese in banks controlled by Britain at Tientsin, where the British and French concessions have been blockaded for many weeks.

Aim at Parallel Measures

The foreign office statement declared emphatically that Japan has not made demands for the surrender of silver in banks at Tientsin.

Talks among the United States, Great Britain and France, aiming at parallel measures to curb Japan's power in China, progressed to the point where, it was understood, they formed an important part of discussions today at a special meeting of the cabinet foreign affairs committee.

The committee's decision will be presented to a meeting of the full cabinet tomorrow. The greatest point at issue in today's meeting was the question of denouncing the 1911 commercial treaty.

When questioned in Commons, Prime Minister Chamberlain has been noncommittal, but authorities today reiterated that Washington, London and Paris have been reviewing their respective trade relations with Japan for several days.

Fear "Second Munich"

Laborites, Liberals and Conservatives, led by Winston Churchill, who fear a "second Munich," organized tonight for an attack on Prime Minister Chamberlain's plan to send Parliament on vacation during August and September.

The opposition suspects that, once Parliament is out of the way, Chamberlain may break off the long-snarled tripower talks with Soviet Russia and try to arrange some new form of "appeasement" with Fuehrer Hitler. The issue will be brought up in Commons tomorrow.

Live-Alone-and-Like-It Author Changes Mind and Is Married

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Authoress Marjorie Hillis and Thomas Henry Roulston

By the Associated Press

Valley Forge, Pa., Aug. 1.—Dark-haired Marjorie Hillis, who liked living alone so much she wrote a book about it, got married today.

Not only that, but she enthusiastically proclaimed "there is nothing to beat old-fashioned love," and announced she'd "like to raise a family."

The 49-year-old New Yorker, famed as author of "Live Alone and Like It," capitulated to romance in a marriage to Thomas Henry Roulston, 65, Brooklyn chain store operator. His 30-year-old son acted as best man and his two grandchildren watched the ceremony in the home of the bride's sister here.

They'll sail in the Normandie from New York tomorrow night for a European honeymoon.

"I'm all excited," confessed the bride—whose friends kept reminding her she once wrote that it was better to read in a bathtub than wait around for a swain's telephone call.

What did she have to say for herself, falling in love like this after all that about the advantages of being a bachelor girl?

"I've taken so much kidding I'm used to it.

"I will be a housewife—the old-fashioned kind. Why, I have already dropped all my syndicate writing. I'd like to raise a family."

Esme Howard, Former British Envoy, Dies

Relapse After Operation Fatal to 75-Year-Old Ex-Ambassador

By the United Press.

Hindhead, Surrey, England, Aug. 1.—Lord Howard of Penrith, 75, former British Ambassador to the United States when he was Sir Esme Howard, died at his home here late today.

The former Ambassador underwent a serious operation several months ago and suffered a relapse two weeks ago.

He was councilor of the British embassy in Washington in 1906-08 and after serving in several European diplomatic posts, was made Ambassador to the United States in 1924. He retained the post until 1930.

When he returned home the King raised him to the peerage and he assumed the title of First Baron Howard of Penrith.

His avocation was the theater, on which he wrote three books.

Lord Howard, born September 15, 1863, came of one of England's most distinguished families. An ancestor although a Catholic,

Press Gives Notice That Spain Wants Gibraltar

Madrid, Aug. 1 (AP).—The government press gave notice today that Spain wants Gibraltar, the stronghold from which Britain has dominated the western entrance to the Mediterranean for 235 years.

The newspapers seized on the anniversary of the loss of "the rock" in 1704 to condemn England for her role in the war of the Spanish succession which led to her seizure of Gibraltar.

Informed persons said, however, it probably would be some time before the Gibraltar issue reaches the point of actual discussions between London and Madrid.

10 Playspots Open Today Or Tomorrow

7 White, 3 Colored Areas Are Chosen; Will Make Total 116

Lewis R. Barrett, District recreation director, yesterday specified ten additional playgrounds to be opened today, or at the latest, tomorrow. Monday he had announced that ten new play areas would be put into operation, bringing the total of those functioning in the District to 116.

Barring unforeseen changes, the new playgrounds to be opened are:

For white children:

Curtis School, P and Thirty-third streets northwest.

Blake School, North Capitol between K and L streets.

Cranch School, Twelfth and G streets southeast.

Brent School, D street and North Carolina avenue southeast.

Randle Highlands School, Pennsylvania avenue and Thirtieth street southeast.

Truesdell School, Illinois avenue and Ingraham street northwest.

Colored Playgrounds

Bell School, Second and D streets southwest.

Crummell School, Gallaudet street and Central avenue northeast.

Magruder School, Seventeenth and M streets northwest.

Barrett said each of the new grounds would be staffed by one trained supervisor.

The director added he hoped soon to obtain sufficient supervisors from the WPA to replace those dismissed under the 18-month WPA rule to keep open other grounds already under operation and even to increase their number by four or five.

Personnel Named

With these, Barrett said, almost every playground in the "old city," i. e. south of Florida avenue, which he deems suitable for the purpose, will have been opened.

Appointments to top supervisory posts, under the immediate administrative authority of Barrett, were

Nazis Recruit 4,600 Workers In U. S., Mostly Reich Citizens

By Edward T. Folliard

Nazi Germany, confronted with an acute labor shortage, is getting an increasing number of "recruits" from the United States, according to figures at the Immigration and Naturalization Service of the Department of Labor.

In the fiscal year of 1939, 4,600 alien Germans, naturalized Germans and persons born in this country of German parents, left the United States for Hitler's Reich, most of them to take jobs.

This was an increase of more than 80 per cent, the number in 1938 having been 2,514.

Of those who left the "land of the free" last year to work in a land where labor is regimented and strikes are treason against the state, 4,000 were aliens; that is, Germans who had come to the United States under their country's quota but had never bothered to take out citizenship papers. They may re-enter the United States if they come back within a year.

Two hundred of those emigrating were naturalized Germans and 400 were native-born persons of Ger-

Loan Bill Dead, Roosevelt Warns Of Results; Adjournment Near

Senate Acts To Speed D.C. Lunacy Trials

11 Other Local Measures Passed; Only 2 Other Capital Measures Pending

By James D Secrest.

The Senate yesterday passed a dozen local bills, including amendments to the lunacy proceedings act, as President Roosevelt vetoed legislation to place firemen on a five-day week and to authorize the Commissioners to settle suits and claims of the District without recourse to Congress.

With the exception of two bills that have passed both houses in different forms, the Senate action practically completed Congressional consideration of District legislation for this session. The Senate probably will accept the House amendments on these bills to authorize extension of parking meters and to amend the real estate commission act.

The 12 local bills passed the Senate as rapidly as the clerk could read the titles and the president pro tem declare them passed.

9 Bills Go to White House

Nine of the measures have passed the House and now go to the White House. The three Senate bills may go through the House by unanimous consent.

President Roosevelt, in vetoing the bill to put firemen on a 5-day, 60-hour week, explained that the Commissioners had informed him that the act, if approved, would require the employment of 207 additional firemen at an initial cost of $414,000 a year, increasing $20,000 a year for five years on account of promotions.

"The Commissioners indicate that in the present financial condition of the District the cost of this act cannot be met without creating a revenue deficit," the President stated.

"No Undue Hardship"

"The Commissioners are of the opinion that, considering the actual hours of fire-fighting service as compared with the hours of duty of firemen in the District of Columbia, and considering the hours of duty required of firemen in the District as compared with the hours of duty of firemen in most of the larger cities throughout the country, no undue hardship will be suffered by local firemen in continuing the present hours of duty."

President Roosevelt also called attention to the provision in the 1940 District supply act for a survey to be made by the Commissioners to determine whether fire stations may be consolidated and economies be effected.

The second District bill was vetoed, the President said, because it is too broad in scope.

Surgeon's Son Admits Slaying His Stepmother

Cape Girardeau, Mo., Aug. 1 (U.P.).—State Trooper Percy R. Little said tonight George W. Gore, jr., son of a prominent surgical specialist, confessed that he shot and killed his stepmother, Mrs. Nancy Gore, July 23 in his father's home at Benton, Ill.

Little said Gore confessed orally after his young wife, Kathryn, had made a written statement in which she said her husband told her he had gone to Benton and killed his stepmother.

Little said young Gore was immediately turned over to State's Attorney Rea Jones and Sheriff Ed Powell, of Benton. He said Gore volunteered to go with them and locate the revolver used in the killing. The trooper quoted young Gore as saying the gun was hidden near Carbondale, Ill.

Little said young Gore, who managed his father's Cape Girardeau office for a weekly salary of $10, did not divulge his motive for the slaying.

Led Forces That Defeated Lending Bill

THE HOUSE yesterday killed the President's $2,800,000,000 lending bill by defeating, 193 to 166, a rule for its consideration.

THE PRESIDENT replied this will mean fewer jobs and fewer business orders, more persons on relief and an increased tax burden. He fixed responsibility on House members voting against the rule.

LEADERS PREPARED for adjournment by Saturday "or possibly within the next 48 hours."

THE LAST "MUST" MEASURE—third deficiency bill—was slated to start through the House today, threatened by three major relief riders.

THE $800,000,000 HOUSING bill appeared doomed by the lending bill defeat. Leaders will decide today whether to put this and wage-hour amendments to a vote.

DEADLOCKED ON THE CONNALLY amendment liberalizing old-age assistance, the Administration's social security amendments were threatened with pigeonholing by a conference committee.

Byrd Faction Leading in Va. Primary

But Price Supporter Beats Carter Glass, Jr., For State Senate

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Aug. 1.—Returns from Virginia's Democratic primary today, scanned for clews to control of the State by rival factions headed by United States Senator Byrd and Gov. James H. Price, saw divided results with perhaps the total favoring the Senator in a majority of races where Byrd-Price factionalism had a part.

Byrd Man Wins; Glass Loses

Burr P. Harrison, a Byrd organization stalwart, administered a decisive defeat to State Senator T. Russel Cather, Price Senate leader, in the Clarke-Frederick-Winchester-Shenandoah District—home district of Senator Byrd. The majority was more than two to one, with only a few small precincts missing.

At the same time, State Senator Charles E. Burks, a Price supporter, defeated Carter Glass, jr., son of Virginia's senior United States Senator, by 4,218 votes to 2,997, in the Campbell-Lynchburg District, on the basis of returns from 29 of 32 precincts in the district.

Byrd Up Next Year

David K. E. Bruce, a son-in-law of the late Andrew Mellon, said to have received support of the Byrd organization, appeared to have defeated Berkeley D. Adams, Price leader, in the race for the House in Charlotte County by an overwhelming majority. Bruce voted for Landon in 1936.

Other leaders in Senate races were: Paul Whitehead, Morton Goode, Charles Burks, George P. Collins, Leonard Muse, Harvey Apperson, Y. Melvin Hodges, Vivian Page and W. Taylor Johnson.

In House races, leaders were: B. C. Goodwin, James B. Martin, W. Tayloe Murphy, Howard C. Rogus, Dr. W. A. Harris, Maurice Rosenburg, Willis E. Cohoon and Samuel D. Rodgers.

Hatch Bill Signature Not Assured

Long Conferences Indicate Criticisms; Author Optimistic

President Roosevelt announced at his press conference yesterday that he would act today on the Hatch bill curbing political activity by Government employes and subordinate officials.

He said he had made up his mind what he would do, but would not reveal whether he would sign the bill or veto it.

Possibility that a veto message would be sent to Congress was seen in the fact that Attorney General Murphy, who has advised the President on the constitutionality of the measure, conferred with him for an hour on the bill late in the afternoon and returned for a second conference after dinner.

Hatch Confident

Another possibility was seen that, instead of vetoing the bill, the President would sign it, issuing at the same time a statement criticising features which he regards as objectionable.

Widespread feeling existed in informed quarters that the bill would be vetoed. Hatch, on the other hand, had said he felt virtually certain that the President would sign the measure.

The President severely criticized the bill at a press conference last week. He emphasized the uncertainty, judging from the language of the bill as to what Government employes could or could not do if it became law.

Murphy Believed in Favor of It

Some of the President's close advisers have evinced a strong desire that the bill be vetoed. Murphy, however, is believed to have favored approval of the measure.

The White House, it was learned, has been advised that the House would uphold a veto of the bill if the President should return it without his approval. One legislator said many Congressmen were absent when a final vote was taken, "and we have learned that most of them would vote against the bill if given a chance."

Police Besiege Gambling Ship; Held at Bay With Fire Hose

By the United Press.

Los Angeles, Aug. 1.—Seagoing deputies closed three ornate gambling barges afloat outside the 3-mile limit tonight and laid siege to a fourth from which they had been repulsed by a fist-slinging crew. The seamen manned high-pressure fire hose and held off the officers, who were in speed boats.

Armed with court orders intended to stop supplies for and solicitation of patrons to the casinos outside territorial waters, the officers successfully boarded the Texas and the Showboat and served papers on the operators and crews. District attorney's deputies waited to board the Tango if it attempted to open tonight.

Other officers conferred on the next step toward subduing the crew of the Rex, which defied two boatloads of deputies.

Fifteen plainclothes officers were reported to have boarded the palatial gaming barge.

The men were spotted by the crew as they mingled with regular patrons and "ushered" back into water taxis for the shore.

Immediately, it was said, the $200,000,000 Deficiency Bill Last Hurdle to Quitting by Saturday; President Declares Taxpayers, Business and Idle Will Suffer

By Robert C. Albright

President Roosevelt yesterday suffered one of the worst defeats of his New Deal Administration when the House refused by a vote of 193 to 166 to consider his spending-lending program.

The vote effectively killed the $2,800,000,000 loan bill for the session and leaders, resigned to the outcome, prepared to wind up the remaining business of Congress this week.

At the White House, President Roosevelt received news of the vote calmly. But he told reporters the action would cost taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars, deprive business of needed stimulus and deny work to the jobless.

Mr. Roosevelt said those who voted against consideration of the bill had an absolute right to vote as they did, but the taxpayers in turn have an absolute right to know where the responsibility lies and the names of the members who voted against the rule.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley and House Majority Leader Rayburn immediately conferred on a clean-up of remaining legislation. Sole remaining "must" bill in the path of adjournment was the $200,000,000 third deficiency measure which will start through the House today.

To Quit by Saturday

Undetermined last night was what will be done with the $800,000,000 slum clearance bill and wage-hour legislation. Rayburn said the Housing bill is no stronger than the lending measure in terms of House rule votes, but was undecided on whether to put it to a test.

Almost hopelessly deadlocked in conference are the social security amendments. Rayburn said he now is "shooting at adjournment by Saturday." Barkley said he hoped for an earlier closing.

Joining with 146 Republicans in defeating the lending bill rule were 47 Democrats. They piled up a majority of 27 votes over the 163 Democrats, 2 Progressives and 1 American-Laborite who voted for the rule.

Veteran House members could not recall when a major Administration measure had been denied a rule in this fashion. On the heels of the decision to postpone consideration of the Administration's neutrality program, the rebuff climaxed a steady succession of defeats for the President in the New Deal's most hostile Congress.

Banters With Reporters

Bantering with reporters, President Roosevelt gave no outward sign of chagrin at his regular press conference. But he turned deadly serious when asked to comment on the vote. He said he had not had time to analyze it, but was convinced that approval of his program would have made its effects felt on business within 60 to 90 days, and that new orders by that time would have started to pour in.

This, he said, would have put people to work. By the same token, he said, people would have been taken from relief rolls, thereby reducing expenditures for relief and thereby reducing taxes to the average taxpayer.

The net result of defeating the rule, the President declared, will be increased cost to the taxpayers, more persons on relief and failure of industrial plants to gain a step-up in production. He repeated he offered no criticism of House members, who had a right to vote as they did, but declared the responsibility was theirs, nonetheless.

$500,000 Jobs Involved

Given time, the President said he could figure the precise number of persons that would have received new jobs and those who would have been taken off relief by the work loans contemplated. Meanwhile, he accepted Senate Majority Leader Barkley's estimate that 500,000 new jobs would have been created.

Smilingly the President paraphrased the words of a popular song in saying only an itty-bitty change was needed in RFC lending powers to start 500,000 people back to work.

A reporter remarked that the program "didn't sound itty-bitty the way you put it out." The President replied that by small changes sometimes large results could be accomplished. Another newsman reminded Mr. Roosevelt of Congressional charges that the loan program was a device for circumventing the $45,000,000,000 statutory debt limit.

RFC Success Cited

The President replied in a parable. Suppose, he said, there was a bank in an average city with $1,000,000 in deposits. That, he said, was a direct debt of the bank to the people who left their money on deposit. Would it be fair, he asked, to write an editorial or make a speech saying this bank had a $1,000,000 debt without saying the bank had adequate assets behind the debt? But this, he said, was what critics were saying about

Roosevelt Backs South in Wage Dispute

Declares Textile Industry Entitled To Differentials

President Roosevelt said yesterday that the South, in his opinion, was entitled to differentials in minimum wages established for particular industries under the wage-hour law.

The President made this statement after a delegation of Southern Senators and Representatives had called at the White House to protest against the recommendation of the committee for the textile industry that a minimum wage of 32½ cents per hour be established for textile mills throughout the country.

He said he was looking into the request of the Southern Congressional group that a minimum of 30 cents an hour be fixed for textile mills.

Andrews Has Not Acted

Since Wage-Hour Administrator Elmer F. Andrews has not acted on the proposal of the industry committee, Mr. Roosevelt's statement indicated that the committee's recommendation might be disapproved. In this event, it would be necessary for the industry to draw up a new wage plan.

The wage-hour law forbids allowance of differentials solely on a regional basis, but permits regional differentials if, as a result of varying production costs, the section receiving the differential would not be given a competitive advantage.

10 Per Cent Differential

Mr. Roosevelt indicated that he thought a 10 per cent differential in favor of the South would be about right. It is not necessary in that section, he said, to have furnaces or winter overcoats. He recalled that Southern wage differentials were recognized by the NRA.

Although the difference between 30 and 32½ cents per hours would be only 20 cents a day, the President declared, this margin would mean the difference between a number of Southern mills remaining in operation or closing up, according to the Congressional group.

of Columbia authority to settle claims in behalf of the District of Columbia," the veto message stated.

"It is apparently the purpose of the legislation to render it possible to compromise small claims without recourse to litigation and thereby save the disproportionate expense which would be entailed by bringing suit in such instances.

"The objective of the measure is clearly desirable. Unfortunately, however, its scope is far broader than the end in view, since no limitation on the size of the claim that would be subject to the proposed authority is included. Such a safeguard, in an appropriate amount, would seem to be requisite."

No Other Action Expected

No further legislative action on either measure is expected before next session.

Upon the signing of the bill to expedite insanity proceedings, congestion in the psychopathic ward at Gallinger Hospital will be relieved. The measure permits the temporary commitment of these patients in St. Elizabeth's Hospital pending adjudication by the Commission on Mental Health or the District Court.

Other House bills approved by the Senate provide:

Permission for the Internal Revenue Bureau to examine local tax records.

Authority for the issuance of chiropractic licenses to George M. and Laura T. Corriveau.

The Senate bills authorize the Commissioners to make regulations governing the spread of communicable diseases, replacing present quarantine statutes, give gasoline importers longer periods for filing requests for refunds, and permit the Healing Arts License Commission to change its examination dates.

A Senate District Committee meeting scheduled for yesterday was postponed indefinitely when Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, indicated he would not ask that the fair trade practices bill be reported this sesion. He previously had said that the Senate would not be asked to approve it before next year.

The Gallup Poll

Illinois Leans Toward G. O. P. President In 1940; 61% Against Roosevelt 3d Term

By Dr. George Gallup.

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 1.—Illinois, which went Democratic in the last two Presidential elections, is leaning toward the Republican side at the present time, judging by surveys of political sentiment conducted throughout the State by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

GEORGE GALLUP

A small majority of voters in the Prairie State, the survey indicates, would prefer to see the Republicans win the 1940 election. A large majority, more than six in every ten, say they would vote against President Roosevelt if he ran for a third term.

The Illinois surveys were conducted by the same methods which have been accurate in State and national elections. The voters were asked:

"If President Roosevelt runs for a third term in 1940, do you think you will vote for him?"

Yes	39%
No	61

"Which party would you like to see win the Presidential election in 1940?"

Want Republicans to win	54%
Want Democrats to win	46

Illinois is the third most populous State in the Union. Recent surveys in the other two, New York and Pennsylvania, have also revealed a Republican trend, with slight majorities saying they would like to see a G. O. P. victory in 1940. Thus, in the three most important States in the Union, the Republican Party symbol appears to be slightly more popular today than the Democratic symbol, though, of course, the selection of candidates in 1940 and events of the campaign might alter this sentiment. In another large State, California, on the other hand, Institute surveys have found Democratic sentiment predominating, with 60 per cent of voters wanting a Democratic victory in 1940.

Virtually all the Republican voters (i. e. those who voted for Landon in 1936) in the Illinois survey oppose a Roosevelt third term and want to see the Republican Party win in 1940. A Roosevelt third term is not overwhelmingly popular even among Illinois Democrats, 40 per cent of whom say they would vote against the President if he ran again. Nor do all Illinois Democratic voters of 1936 want to see another Democratic victory in 1940. Approximately one-fourth of them (28 per cent) say they would like to see the Republicans win.

The rural and small town areas of Illinois continue to be more Republican than the cities. Whereas a slight majority of voters (52 per cent) in the urban sections want to see the Republicans win in 1940, the ratio in the rural and small town areas is more than 3 to 2.

Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, is the favorite choice for 1940 of Illinois Republican voters with opinions on candidates. Senator Arthur Vandenberg, of Michigan, is second in popularity and Senator Robert Taft, of Ohio, third.

Among Democratic voters the leading choice, in case Roosevelt does not run, is John N. Garner, with James A. Farley second and Paul V. McNutt third.

Illinois Republicans favor:

Dewey	41%
Vandenberg	32
Taft	14
Landon	5
Borah	2
Others	6

Illinois Democrats favor (In case F. D. R. does not run):

Garner	49%
Farley	17
McNutt	8
Hull	7
Hopkins	5
Others	14

Political Sentiment in Four Large States

New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois and California account for one-fourth of the electoral votes in a Presidential election and cast more than one-third of the popular vote in 1936.

The Institute has already reported political sentiment in New York, Pennsylvania and California and today reports on Illinois. The attitude of the voters in these four large States toward a third term and toward the 1940 campaign is summarized below.

1. "If President Roosevelt runs for a third term in 1940 do you think you will vote for him?"

Would Vote For Him

New York Voters	42%
Pennsylvania Voters	46
Illinois Voters	39
California Voters	43

Would Vote Against Him

New York Voters	58%
Pennsylvania Voters	54
Illinois Voters	61

Record Vote Sought on Bill For USHA

Friends of Measure To Increase Lending Concede Its Defeat

Conceding defeat for the Administration bill to increase lending capacity of the United States Housing Authority, friends of the measure yesterday urged the House leadership to call it up for the purpose of obtaining a "record vote."

Members of the badly battered "urban-liberal bloc" said they were attempting to persuade the leadership not to drop the housing bill, even though they were convinced that House refusal yesterday to consider the self-liquidating loan bill spelled certain doom for housing expansion.

The USHA proposal would double the loan capacity of USHA to $1,600,000,000 (including $200,000,000 for rural housing), and provide $73,000,000 for annual subsidies. It already has passed the Senate.

Meanwhile, the House liberal bloc was pinning on the Senate its hopes for modification of WPA regulations, but even if any of the proposed amendments to the third deficiency bill succeed in getting through the Senate, they will face an intensely hostile House conference committee.

David Lasser, president of the Workers Alliance, organization of WPA workers, said last night that "we consider the situation sufficiently serious to plead in the name of decency and common sense that Congress not adjourn until it has remedied the gross injustice and absurdities in the present relief act."

Aside from the housing and deficiency bills, the only other possible obstacle to adjournment is the series of proposed amendments to the wage-hour law. A determined group of conservative House Democrats has been striving for weeks to obtain action on the Barden amendments, which would reportedly exempt nearly 2,000,000 wage earners from the act.

A report of the Rules Committee permitting the Barden and other amendments to reach the floor of the House will be filed today by Chairman Sabath. Whether the leadership would call up the amendments was still an open question since the Barden bill is bitterly opposed by the Administration.

Two minor amendments to the wage-hour act, approved by the New Deal and generally considered noncontroversial, were passed unanimously by the Senate yesterday. They would exempt rural telephone operators and residents of Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands from the act.

United for Protection Against Terrific 'Organization of Aged,' Williams Tells Youth

Boston, Aug. 1 (AP).—Aubrey Williams, National Youth administrator, declared today that "young people must organize to protect themselves against the terrific organization of the aged for public benefits."

WILLIAMS

He said in an interview that the voting age "might well be lowered" so that youth will have more of a voice.

Declaring the costs of Government can't be increased endlessly, he asserted:

"If the aged are to get more and more, then it must come from some other public service. Youth's interests are threatened from the standpoint of public support of education."

Senate Leader Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, said yesterday that the Logan bill to restrict the administrative freedom of scores of Federal agencies, recently passed by the Senate, would be shelved for this session.

Barkley told reporters he had obtained an agreement with proponents of the measure, including Senator Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, its author, to defer further action until next year.

The day after the Senate approved the bill, Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, filed a motion to reconsider, protesting that it had gone through by unanimous consent when he was out of the chamber. The Senate agreed unanimously yesterday to his motion.

The following nominations were confirmed yesterday by the Senate:

Campbell E. Beaumont, United States judge of Southern District of California; Harry E. Pratt, United States judge, Division 4, Alaska; Herman E. Moore, of Illinois, judge of the District Court of the Virgin Islands; Charles S. Lynch, United States attorney, Delaware; Harold M. Kennedy, United States attorney, Eastern District of New York; Henry L. Dillingham, United States marshal, Western District of Missouri; James L. Fly of Tennessee, member of the Federal Communications Commission; Lee M. Eddy, of Missouri, member Railroad Retirement Board, and George A. Sweeney, postmaster, Attleboro, Mass.

Saltonstall Assails Attitude of Struck Mill's Official

South Barre, Mass., Aug. 1 (AP).—Sharply attacking the assistant treasurer of the struck Barre Wool Combing Co. for an "outrageous" attitude toward the Massachusetts conciliation board, Gov. Saltonstall declared tonight "no one can adopt the high-handed attitude he has adopted toward government officials."

The Governor's remarks were delivered to a press conference in Boston shortly after a labor union spokesman had demanded that he order the factory closed and as State troopers in steel helmets stood guard at its gate, where they dispersed 3,000 after fisticuffs last night.

Saltonstall's criticism was of H. N. Flanders, the company's chief negotiator in the dispute which produced Tuesday's walkout of A. F. of L. members.

Airline Hearing's Date in Doubt

The Civil Aeronautics Authority yesterday informed Senator Smathers (Democrat), of New Jersey, that it was impossible to state when a hearing would be held on the application of Pennsylvania-Central Airlines for permission to extend its service from Washington and Baltimore to Atlantic City.

Chairman Robert H. Hinckley, of the CAA, also told Smathers temporary permission could not be given the line. He added the authority would act as soon as possible.

Contracts Let For New General Federal Offices

Contracts totaling $2,487,000 for the new General Federal Office Building at Second and Virginia avenue southwest have been awarded to McCloskey & Co., of Philadelphia, the Federal Works Administration announced yesterday.

The building is scheduled for opening early next year, but officials said yesterday they were not yet certain who would occupy it. The structure was originally planned for the Census Bureau.

The six-story, stone and brick structure will cover more than 100,000 square feet in the block bounded by Second, Third and D streets and Virginia avenue southwest, and provide 7,430,000 cubic feet of space.

Plane Remakes First Air Corps Flight Today

To Dash 14 Miles From Fort Myer To Alexandria

An Army combat plane will dash the 14-mile round trip from Fort Myer to Alexandria at 11:30 a. m. today commemorating the test flight of the first plane purchased 30 years ago by the Army.

The flight, to be made by Lieut. D. H. Baker, will be part of a Nation-wide celebration of the birthday anniversary of the Air Corps.

Exercises at 10 a. m. at the Smithsonian Institution, where the 800-pound Wright biplane which made the original flight is on display, will be held under auspices of the Early Birds, pioneer fliers' organization.

Col. H. H. C. Richards, representing the Air Corps, will discuss the history of the flying service and accept a laurel wreath to be attached to the famous "flying machine."

Fortress Breaks Record

Meanwhile, the Army Air Corps announced last night its second world record in three days.

A "Flying Fortress" yesterday carried 11,023 pounds a distance of 625 miles at a speed of 259.398 miles an hour. It streaked from Wright Field to St. Jacobs, Ill., and back at 20,000-foot altitude. An Italian plane held the previous mark of 251.878 miles per hour. Capt. C. S. Irvine and Capt. Pearl Robey piloted the American plane and Capt. C. J. Crane and Lieut. P. G. Miller were navigators.

A mishap several days ago precluded the planned "unveiling" of a radio-controlled, pilotless plane which, in 12-foot model form, was to have been flown for the first time in public. Details of the accident were not disclosed.

Activities at Wright Field will be viewed by Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Air Corps, and ranking aeronautical officials including Col. Sumpter Smith, chairman, and Tom Hardin and C. B. Allen, members of the Air Safety Board, as well as Clinton M. Hester, administrator, and Grant Mason and Oswald Ryan, members of the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

Bolling Field and other Air Corps posts throughout the country will be open to visitors during the day.

Bombers Off for Dayton

Five bombers yesterday left Langley Field for Dayton to participate in the ceremonies. En route they engaged in navigation and training work after picking up newspaper and newsreel men at Bolling Field.

The exercises today mark the purchase of the plane which made the round trip from the Fort Myer drill field to Shooters Hill, Alexandria, now crowned by the George Washington Masonic Memorial.

Ceremonies at the Smithsonian and Fort Myer will be attended by Roy Waite, pioneer flier now employed by the Navy Department; Ray Knabenshue, first professional pilot, who was a stunt flier at the St. Louis Fair in 1904; Augustus Post, former secretary of the Aero Club of America, predecessor of the National Aeronautic Association, and Capt. Horace Wild, early balloonist. Mrs. John M. Bryant, who began flying in 1912, will preside at the exercises and entertain members of the Early Birds and representatives of the Air Corps at luncheon afterwards.

Court Slated To Decide Baby Custody Today

Seizure of her 5-year-old foster daughter by District officials was charged yesterday by Mrs. Catherine Bayasco Perna, of 1341 Connecticut avenue northwest. Justice Luhring ordered the child produced in District Court at 10 a. m. today for decision of the mother's claims.

Mrs. Perna some years ago was married to Ramon Bayasco, a head waiter, who sued for annulment, charging that his wife told him the baby was her own, but that it was adopted.

Mrs. Perna's counsel, Douglas L. Hatch, told Justice Luhring that Mrs. Perna got the baby from Mrs. Annie L. Grover, of 3813 Jocelyn street northwest. Mrs. Grover recently was in District Court to answer the habeas corpus action of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Thorne, of East Riverdale, Md., who claimed they accepted Mrs. Grover's offer of shelter for their baby when they were destitute. When they went back for their baby, the Thornes said, Mrs. Grover told them the child had been adopted and showed them consent papers which they had signed. They said they did not understand the papers when they signed them.

Justice Luhring brought out the connection of Mrs. Grover with the Perna case by questioning.

Monaghan Off to Visit U. S. Business Clubs

Joseph C. Monaghan, governor of the second district of the National American Business Clubs, left yesterday to visit clubs of the organization in Maryland, Virginia, North and South Carolina.

He will seek co-operation in the movement to aid in curbing juvenile delinquency as well as expansion of membership.

Admiral Stark Takes Oath as Naval Chief; Edison Praises Leahy's 'Vigorous Action'

Underwood & Underwood.

Rear Admiral Walter B. Woodson, judge advocate general of the Navy, swearing in Admiral Harold R. Stark as Chief of Naval Operations. Charles Edison, Acting Secretary of the Navy, and Admiral William D. Leahy, former Chief of Naval Operations, who will become Governor of Puerto Rico, look on Admiral Harold R. Stark yesterday took oath of office as chief of naval operations in the presence of Admiral William D. Leahy, his predecessor, who leaves next month to assume his duties as Governor of Puerto Rico, Acting Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison and other officials of the sea forces.

Edison paid tribute to the "sound and original thinking as well as the vigorous action" which marked Admiral Leahy's service.

Admiral Stark declared he intended to continue existing policies for the time being and that any new action would "have to be developed after I get in contact with the people here."

Although admitting that preparations for next year's fleet problem are underway, he refused to divulge details other than to say that two problems were being considered.

Admiral Stark added he did not expect to accompany President Roosevelt on his vacation trip to Alaska.

Discussing his new job as Governor of Puerto Rico, Admiral Leahy said there were "some problems on which Congressional action is needed." He listed sugar quota provisions and application to the island of the wages and hours law and coastwise shipping regulations as matters needing adjustment.

Island defense, he declared, will be handled by the military authorities in co-operation with the civil administration. He emphasized, however, that "the Governor's office is purely civil" and asserted he "would not be involved in military preparations."

Commenting on leaving the service, he said, "It is always with regret that one severs close relations with associates after all these years."

Admiral Stark, former commander of Cruiser Division 3, Battle Force, holds the Distinguished Service Medal, Order of the Crown of Italy, Mexican Service Medal and Victory Medal with Destroyer Clasp. He was aide to both Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams and Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson.

A former chief of the Bureau of Navigation, Admiral Leahy's last sea duty was as commander of the battle force. He has received both the Navy Cross and the Distinguished Service Medal and is a commander of the Portuguese Military Order of Avis.

2 Leap to Death From Hospital, Hotel Windows

The woman, Mrs. Elsie Turner Raymond, had been living with her sister, Mrs. Grace Nichols, at 211 Delaware avenue southwest. She left the Delaware avenue address Monday and obtained a room at the hotel.

The man was Charles Tippett, who gave his address as 50 New York avenue northwest when he entered the hospital Saturday for an operation. He originally entered Gallinger Hospital July 12 and stayed one day. He was brought back to the hospital by his wife Saturday.

Tender Sinking, Skipper Swims 1½ Miles to Isle

Poplar Island, Md., Aug. 1 (AP).—Timothy Cronin, 52, swam a mile and a half to safety today when the motor on a 37-foot tender he was operating for the annual cruise of the Maryland Yacht Club, stopped in a heavy sea.

About 50 yachts were making the week-long cruise to Eastern Shore regattas and the open tender, used to carry ice to club boats and as a ferry for members, was trailing them when the fleet sailed for Oxford after a day of fishing.

Cronin, weary and with arms swollen after the long immersion, said the motor stopped about 2:30 this morning. The open vessel began to ship water in the heavy sea. After trying to bail with a bucket and water cooler, he dived overboard and swam to Jefferson Island.

House Votes New Locks for Panama Canal

Proposal to Return Bill to Committee Fails, 144 to 166

A new set of locks for the Panama Canal, costing a total of $277,000,000, was voted by the House yesterday after a proposal to send the measure back to committee was defeated, 144 to 166.

The canal bill, which now goes to the Senate, authorizes expenditure of $15,000,000 for preliminary work this year. The Navy has estimated that the whole project can be completed in about six years, as against 12 or 15 years for the proposed Nicaragua Canal.

Specially designed to resist air attacks and sabotage, the new locks would be located several hundred yards from the present structures.

Locks Held Too Close

The locks, advocated on grounds of future increased traffic as well as national defense, will be large enough to take care of giant liners. Present estimates provide for chambers 1,200 feet long, 135 feet wide and with 45 feet navigable depth.

Location of the locks was assailed in House debate yesterday by Representative Izac (Democrat), of California, a former naval officer, who cautioned against "putting all our eggs in one basket." He asserted that in air raids, locks "one-half or three-quarters of a mile away, would still be under the same fire as if they were a few feet from the other locks."

Third Plan Rejected

In the report from the Committee on Merchant Marine, Chairman Bland, of Virginia, stated that a projected route for a new canal through the Republic of Panama, the Chiriqui Route, "appears impractical," while the Nicaragua route would cost about $1,400,000,000.

The House rejected an amendment by Representative Shafer (Republican), of Wisconsin, that would have required the Government to make all contracts under the bill with American firms and to give American citizens employment preferences.

What Is a Bird in the Hand Worth?

Eighteen-year-old Owen Heflin has one today but he doesn't know what to do with it. It is a duck hawk which he captured alive yesterday "because it made me sick to see it kill that bluejay." He spotted it yesterday in a tree across the street from his home, 1484 Meridan place northwest, as it was rending the poor bluejay. Fashioning a boomerang-like contraption, to which he attached a long string, he climbed to the first limb of the tree and let fly in the hawk's direction and hooked the bird. "Now I don't know what to do with the villain," said the youth

Door Is Salvaged Off Treasure Ship

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 1 (AP).—Officers of the treasure-seeking Italian steamer Falco pointed to rusty pieces of an iron door today as evidence of progress in efforts to salvage silver believed to be in the hold of the sunken Ward liner Merida.

The door, they said, was from the Merida's baggage room, in which the silver bullion was reported to have been stored. The Falco crew has been working since May at the place where the Merida went down in 1911 off Cape Charles.

Judge Fay Bentley Reports 1,308 Cases in Both Sexes Last Year

Many more girls are haled before Washington courts as delinquents than is the average for other cities, Juvenile Court Judge Fay L. Bentley told President Roosevelt in her annual report yesterday.

The commonest charge against the girls, Judge Bentley said, was being unruly or incorrigible, which was alleged in 55 per cent of the complaints filed. This charge was made against only 7 per cent of the boys.

The boys most often were accused of stealing, which was charged in 44 per cent of the cases, while girls were accused of stealing in only 18 per cent of the cases.

Sex offenses were charged against about an equal number of boys and girls, the report said.

1,308 Cases of Delinquent

Judge Bentley cited the reports to the Children's Bureau of the Labor Department as showing the greater number of girl delinquents here. The same authority indicated that in other cities, as in Washington, the total number of boys accused in juvenile courts is far greater than the total of girls.

The court in the last year handled 1,308 cases of delinquent children. Before the court were 369 children who were found to be dependent and to need the attention of social agencies.

The age most prone to delinquency, the report showed, was 17. Of those before the court, 333 were this age, 303 were 16 years old and 252 were 15 years old.

Despite its name, the Juvenile Court dealt with 1,192 adults in the last year, Judge Bentley said. Of these, 992 were accused of failing to support minor children and 179 of failing to support children born out of wedlock. Failure to comply with compulsory education laws was charged to 19 persons and violation of the child labor laws to 2.

Cites Lack of Workers

Lack of social workers greatly hampered work in the adult department of the court, Judge Bentley said. Her report said the National Probation Association and the United States Childrens Bureau considered 50 cases per worker a sufficient case load. By this standard, said Judge Bentley, four case workers in her court were doing the work of 24 persons in handling the 1,192 cases.

Besides causing the time of the court to be occupied with other than judicial functions, this staff inadequacy, Judge Bentley said, left the court unable to settle cases of marital disagreement. If there were enough workers, she indicated, it would be possible to investigate and make adjusments instead of allowing legal actions to be started.

The report was the first to be made in seven years.

Moodys Smash Endurance Mark For Light Planes

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 1 (AP).—The flying Moody brothers established a new light plane endurance record tonight—and kept on going.

At 11:43 p. m. (Eastern standard time), Hunter Moody, 25, and Humphrey, 20, completed 223 hours and 43 minutes of continuous flying. The previous record was 218 hours and 43 minutes.

They were undecided how much longer they would try to stay aloft. Flying a monoplane with a 55-horsepower motor, they have been cruising within a 30-mile radius of the Springfield Municipal Airport since July 23.

Fuel and supplies were hoisted into their plane from a motor truck by means of a weighted rope with a snap hook.

Camp Leads Race For Owen's Seat

Griffin, Ga., Aug. 1 (AP).—A. Sidney Camp, Newnan lawyer and assistant United States district attorney, held a lead of approximately 800 votes in the race to succeed the late Representative Emmett Owen on the basis of nearly complete but unofficial returns tonight in Georgia's Fourth Congressional District.

His nearest opponent, Edgar Blalock, of Griffin, Owen's secretary, had led in early returns.

The Associated Press tabulation showed Camp with 8,194 votes, Blalock with 7,425, Louis C. Clark, of Greenville, with 1,744, and O. M. Duke, of Flovilla, the lone Republican in the race, with 30.

Mrs. James A. Farley Flies to Los Angeles

Los Angeles, Aug. 1 (INS).—Mrs. James A. Farley, wife of the Postmaster General, arrived in Los Angeles today by airplane. She said she would remain in the city for two weeks while her husband is in Europe.

Police Besiege Gambling Ship

crew manned fire hoses to keep the sheriff's officers from attempting to board the craft again.

A Coast Guard patrol boat swung close to the gaming ship, but made no further attempt to enforce a temporary restraining order.

The court order, effective immediately, was issued late today and cited ship operators to appear August 11 to show cause why the injunction shouldn't be made permanent.

Attorney General Earl Warren sent 150 State police and deputies to Santa Monica Bay, where the Rex continued to operate in defiance of abatement orders issued Friday.

The officers carried copies of the temporary injunction to serve on the operators. Later, the district attorney's office said complaints of bookmaking, a felony, had been issued against the owners and operators of the four ships.

The shipowners claim they are outside the jurisdiction of the State.

[The House is expected to act before adjournment on a bill by Representative Celler (Democrat), New York, to prohibit operation of "offshore" gambling ships, its leaders said tonight. The bill, backed by Attorney General Murphy, was reported favorably yesterday by the Judiciary Committee.—Editor's note.]

Bid Farewell to Departing Danish Minister

More than 100 members of the Danish Club of Washington said farewell last night to Otto Wadstead, Minister from Denmark and Iceland, who will go to Rome to fill the post of Danish envoy. At the farewell reception in the Carlton Hotel, the minister and his wife were presented with a large bouquet of white and red roses, the club sang the Danish national anthem, and Niels Nielson, president, lauded the work of Mr. Wadstead, who is the only envoy in Washington to represent two nations. Marines Admit Hotel Slaying, Sheriff Says

Prints on Bottles Lead to Arrest of 2 From Plane Carrier

By the Associated Press

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 1.—Norfolk Police Chief John F. Wood said today two Marines, Wallace E. Miller, 18, and Lawrence M. King, 19, had admitted to him that they killed F. T. Jennings, 49-year-old Augusta, Ga., salesman, in a hotel room here July 24.

The chief had questioned the two enlisted men in the office of Capt. Ralph Wood, who commands the aircraft carrier Ranger to which Miller and King are attached.

Miller, whose home is at Johnson City, Tenn., and King, whose family lives at Columbia, Miss., Chief Woods said, related "extenuating circumstances" which he did not feel at liberty to divulge now. The pair had been in the Ranger's brig since being taken yesterday on strength of fingerprints in the hotel room.

Jennings, member of a prominent South Carolina family, was fatally beaten in his downtown hotel room a week ago shortly after walking through the lobby accompanied by two men in khaki.

Fingerprints from fragments of bottles used in bludgeoning the salesmen were sent to the Federal Bureau of Investigation where they were identified from Marine Corps records as those of Miller and King.

Rear Admiral M. H. Simons, commandant of the navy yard, interested himself in the case when in investigating the trampling of his dahlia beds, he learned that a gatekeeper had seen two marines climbing the wall at the garden a few hours after Jennings was attacked. The officer then obtained permission for the city police to examine the records of marines stationed in the reservation.

Rocca Funeral Tomorrow; Burial In Arlington

Funeral for Daniel Rocca, 43, will be held at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow at Fort Myer Chapel, after brief services at Chambers funeral home, 1400 Chapin street northwest. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Mr. Rocca died Monday night at Mount Alto Hospital. He was a member of Second Division Post No. 28, American Legion, and the American Legion National Guard of Honor. In the World War he served in France with the Twenty-ninth Division Cavalry.

After the war Mr. Rocca took up commercial aviation, but was grounded two years ago because of heart trouble. He had been doing experimental work for some time at the Hybla Valley airport in Virginia. He lived here at 1810 C street southeast.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Della E. Rocca, and a brother, Claude E. Rocca, of this city.

Lieut. Col. H. M. Trippe Dies in Wisconsin

Whitewater, Wis., Aug. 1 (AP).—Lieut. Col. Harry M. Trippe, 67, former Milwaukee District Engineer of the U. S. Army Engineering Corps, who won a distinguished service medal for a rapid construction job in France during the World War, died at his home here today.

Trippe was honored in 1921 for his feat as commanding officer of the 308th Engineers in the Meuse-Argonne offensive in bridging a slough in record time to permit movement of heavy artillery.

Sleigh-Riding Ladies Inspire Paris Stylists

Paris, Aug. 1 (AP).—Sleigh-riding ladies, violinists and daring horsemen have inspired romantic styles for women's winter clothes.

Tight cutaway jackets with swallow-tailed backs flare boldly to fit over bustled frocks—styles copied from sleighing days—with their fur tippets and muffs.

Military braidings decorate "sleigh-riding" models as well as modern tailleurs and coats. Contrasting jackets of plaid velvet, scarlet wool, striped silks or Astrakhan fur were cut long on the hips and fitted tight.

Dresses were shown also with skirts straight, slightly flared or fulled only at front or back. Dress sleeves were long and tight, shoulders flat and necks usually high. Skirts were moderately short.

Audit Committee Meets Today on Liberties Inquiry

The Senate Audit and Control Committee will decide at a meeting today whether to grant a request yesterday by President Roosevelt that the Senate civil liberties investigation be continued.

Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, is author of a resolution granting the investigating committee an additional $100,000.

Mr. Roosevelt said that, although Senator La Follette, Wisconsin Progressive, had promised a year ago to bring the investigation to a close, the committee had uncovered new evidence of violations of civil liberties. La Follette, chairman of the Civil Liberties Committee, has refrained from asking more funds, in view of his promise.

Grace A. Shipley Funeral Today

Funeral for Mrs. Grace A. Shipley, 65, of 608 Kennedy street northwest, will be at 3 p. m. today at the Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest, with burial in Glenwood Cemetery.

Mrs. Shipley died at Atlantic City Monday as a result of a fall on the boardwalk at Ocean City. She was a member of Brightwood Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, and leaves her husband, Joseph J. Shipley; two sons, Milford A. and Harvey J. Shipley, and a brother, Harry Hipsley, of Rockville.

Elliott Roosevelt Attacks Stalin

Fort Worth, Tex., Aug. 1 (AP).—Elliott Roosevelt said tonight in one of his tri-weekly radio talks that Josef Stalin is the "bloodiest of all the murderous despots that encumber the earth" and that Adolf Hitler "is a Boy Scout" in comparison.

In commenting on dispatches reporting that 79 prominent Russians had been stripped of their decorations he said: "It would be superfluous, I suppose, to add that, in all likelihood, they will also be stripped of their heads."

Russia to Borrow Billion for Defense

Moscow, Aug. 1 (AP).—State loan of 6,000,000,000 rubles (normally $1,134,000,000) for industrialization and defense was announced by the Soviet government tonight.

For the purchasers of bonds who do not want the 4 per cent interest, there are optional lottery chances.

Louisiana Incomes Studied by Irey

New Orleans, La., Aug. 1 (U.P.).—Elmer Irey, chief of the intelligence unit of the Internal Revenue Department, tonight studied reports of investigations of income tax returns of Louisiana bigwigs.

Irey came here to determine how far the probes had progressed and if additional agents were needed in the investigations.

The United States district grand jury was continuing its secret investigation into charges of mail fraud, income tax violations, hot oil running and Works Progress Administration.

Hoover Asserts 'Wise Congress' Killed Loan Bill

Salt Lake City, Aug. 1 (AP).—Noting a parallel between President Roosevelt's defeat on the lending measure and reverses he suffered in the latter part of his own administration, former President Hoover told reporters tonight that "in my opinion is was a wise Congress that killed this bill."

Hoover said in his last years in the White House he "was also faced by a rebellious Congress, and I don't believe Mr. Roosevelt's problem is quite as difficult as mine was."

He said he did not believe the House's action in refusing to consider the lending measure marked the end of the New Deal, although "it was a severe blow."

Minneapolis Star Purchases Journal

Minneapolis, Aug. 1 (AP).—The Minneapolis Journal, evening and Sunday newspaper in its sixty-first year, was purchased today by the Minneapolis Star, also an evening newspaper.

John Cowles, president of the Star company, and Carl W. Jones, president of the Journal, said the combined newspapers would be published evening and Sunday as the Star-Journal. The consolidation became effective today.

Sayre Favors Export Quotas For Philippines

New High Commissioner Issues First Statement Since His Appointment

Postponement of Philippine independence beyond 1946 should be considered by Congress only at the request of the commonwealth government, Francis B. Sayre, new high commissioner to the islands, said yesterday in his first statement since his appointment.

Sayre, who expects to take the oath of office next week and sail for Manila in September, highly praised his predecessor, Paul V. McNutt, but refused to subscribe to McNutt's view that the Philippines should not be relinquished.

Meanwhile, the appointment of Golden W. Bell, assistant solicitor general of the United States, as legal adviser to the high commissioner was announced.

Recommended by Sayre

The appointment, which does not require Senate confirmation, was made by President Roosevelt on Sayre's recommendation.

A native of New Mexico, Bell is a graduate of Harvard Law School and practiced law in San Francisco from 1910 until his appointment in 1933 as special assistant to the Attorney General in charge of anti-trust cases. He was named assistant solicitor general in 1935.

In a prepared statement Sayre said he hoped Congress will pass a bill before it providing quotas for exports to the United States of five principal Philippine products.

Sayre stressed that the Filipinos long had aspired to independence and that the Tydings-McDuffie act was in the nature of a "compact" granting them their wish.

Although admitting conditions in the Far East have changed considerably since the law was enacted, he refused to give his views concerning a pact with Japan to neutralize and guarantee the independence of the islands.

Problem Is Economic

Sayre emphasized that "the immediate problem facing us is an economic one."

"With independence will come the end of the broad, general preferences which Philippine products enjoy in the American market and American products in the Philippine market," he continued.

Graduated export taxes would be levied under the Tydings-McDuffie act on shipments to the United States beginning with 5 per cent next year, Sayre said.

He asserted that Philippine industries making up 40 per cent of Philippine exports to the United States—cigars, scrap tobacco, coconut oil, pearl buttons and embroideries—would go under in a year or two of the taxes were levied.

"To prevent this quite unnecessary economic dislocation," he explained, "a bill was passed by the House yesterday and is now before the Senate, which substitutes a system of quota restrictions in place of export taxes with respect to these few exceptional industries. I hope with all my heart it will be passed.

U. S. Protests Reported on Nippon Attacks

Said to Have Been Lodged Over Recent Assaults in China

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo (Wednesday), Aug. 2.—A United States protest against a series of recent assaults by Japanese in China upon Americans was reliably reported today to have been made by Eugene H. Dooman, the charge d'affaires.

Dooman was said to have told Seijiro Yoshizawa, chief of the American section of the Japanese foreign office, that it was a "reasonable assumption" that Japan's anti-British movement in China was being converted into a general anti-foreign agitation.

Simultaneously, it was reported that British Ambassador Craigie had threatened to break up the British-Japanese conference on Tientsin affairs unless the anti-British movement in China was placed under control.

Teh Japanese foreign office denied Craigie had threatened to break up the talks. Japanese circles, however, interpreted the report as an indication of British-American teamwork in the Far East.

2 British Women Reported Stripped

By International News Service

Peipin (Wednesday), Aug. 2.—Two British women missionaries today were reported stripped and searched by Japanese at Kaifeng.

The stripping was said to have been done in the presence of men. It was the first instance of undressing of British men and women reported in North China except those in connection with the Japanese blockade of the British concession at Tientsin.

Soon after the Tientsin blockade was under way as many as a dozen Britons reported they were similarly mistreated by Japanese sentries.

The British government made formal protests against such acts by Japanese troops and the two governments are now negotiating the Tientsin matter in talks at Tokyo.

To Urge End of Hostilities

Tsingtao, China, Aug. 1 (AP).—Japanese manipulation of the complex China situation took a new turn today with a mass meeting to urge an end of hostilities and a single, unified Chinese government under former Chinese Premier Wang Ching-wei.

The mass meeting was under the direction of the Japanese-controlled Tsingtao city administration. The move caused many neutral observers to believe that Japanese wanted to plant the thought of peace in the minds of the Chinese.

Local officials plastered Tsingtao with posters announcing the mass meeting and notified all Chinese households and all Chinese employed in foreign households that one representative of each group would be required to attend. In most instances Chinese complied.

Wang Ching-wei has proclaimed formation of a new political party in China, indorsed by the Japanese-sponsored Peiping and Nanking regimes.

Nazis Take 4,600 U. S. Workers

Most of the emigrants were mechanics, building trades workers and engineers who have been out of work in the United States. They were recruited by agents of German industries in this country, who arranged to pay passage and expenses to Germany.

Commenting on the movement, an official of the North German Lloyd Line in New York said:

"The consulates representing Germany are swamped with request from workers in the Midwest. But the consuls make no attempt to recruit workers. Wages in Germany are good in comparison with living costs and a great deal of interest is being shown in the movement. The largest number sailed in the spring."

According to reports in the Midwest, Eugene J. Buerk, an agent of German industries, did much of the recruiting in Milwaukee and other centers heavily populated with Germans.

When Hitler rose to power in Germany, that country, like most others, had a serious unemployment problem. Today there not only is no unemployment (except that Jews have difficulty getting work), but Germany has been importing workers from Italy, Poland and other countries. Last winter 3,000 German maidservants working in the Netherlands were summoned home to relieve the shortage of domestic help in the Reich.

Germany's compulsory military conscription, which takes 1,000,000 out of the labor market each year.

The rearmament drive, under which arms factories and related industries are being operated at a furious pace.

The public works program, which has resulted in thousands of workers being taken from normal employment to work on new military roads, public buildings, and the like.

Building of new fortifications, particularly in the west.

The Goering four-year plan to make Germany sulf-sufficient, a campaign which has created a need for thousands of workers to man new industries.

100,000 Beds Ready For English War Victims

London, Aug. 1 (AP).—Minister of Health Walter Elliott told Commons today 100,000 beds would be available "for the first wave of casualties" in England, in event of war.

From 9,000 to 10,000 trained nurses have been enrolled, he added, and 45,000 auxiliary nurses registered for training.

National Symphony Orchestra Wins Praise From Smallens

Alexander Smallens, guest conductor of tonight's "Sunset Symphony" and his wife, were pictured at the National Symphony Orchestra rehearsal yesterday.

Alexander Smallens, Russian-born musician, who made himself famous as conductor of opera companies and symphony orchestras in Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and New York, puffed a black pipe on the Watergate barge yesterday afternoon in high good humor.

His first rehearsal with the National Symphony Orchestra, which he is to conduct at tonight's performance of Puccini's opera, "Madame Butterfly," brought from him only praise.

"I never expected a young orchestra to be so perfected and flexible. They have a very fine feeling for ensemble playing," he said. "Hans has done an excellent job," he added, explaining that he had known Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra, since they were both with the Philadelphia Orchestra, about 12 years ago.

Smallens, who has "been coming to Washington on and off" since 1915, stepped on the Watergate barge for the first time yesterday. "This is a most inspiring place for a concert," he said, pointing his pipe at the Lincoln Memorial. "It is beautiful."

His powerful body and large head, dark under wavy black hair and black moustache, looked even larger on the small camp chair at the front of the barge. Before him the stage had been enlarged with an apron and space for footlights, and beyond was the sand scow on which the orchestra is to play tonight.

"I expect I shall fall in the water at the end of the first act," he laughed, "and I hope it is cool."

The Watergate site is better adapted for opera performances than the Lewisohn Stadium in New York or Philadelphia's Robin Hood Dell, Smallens declared, as the audience is closer to the stage and can see better. "This is really the size of an opera house," he added.

Arrangements to accommodate an audience larger than any opera house could hold were announced by the Office of National Capital Parks, enabling up to 50,000 persons to hear the music, even if they cannot all see. Additional loud speakers have been installed in the area northwest of the Lincoln Memorial above the steps, and on both sides of the underpass road to accommodate the overflow attendance. Frank T. Gartside, acting superintendent, explained that the service is free but asked the public to take away any papers or other materials they bring with them.

1914 Reversed In 25 Years, Axis Claims

War Looms Again, Says Paper; Army of 2,000,000 to Celebrate

By the United Press.

Berlin, Aug. 1.—Rearmed Germany boasted tonight that all the advantages will be on her side in another war, and backed her boast with 2,000,000 men under arms who tomorrow will celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the World War's outbreak.

In a front-page splash comparing Germany's striking power now with what it was in 1914, Propaganda Minister Goebbels' newspaper, Der Angriff, said Nazi Germany wants peace, but is ready to fight and win unless it is a peace "that guarantees us security of existence and our living space."

Headline: "Will There Be War?"

"August 1st, 1914; August 1st, 1939 . . . World Again Speaks of War . . . Will There Be War?"

The difference, it said, may be expressed in two words—Adolf Hitler.

The article said history repeated itself, but with essential variations. It enumerated three differences between European situations then and now.

It said of 1914:

"The Western powers had the advantage of greater armies and better strategic positions in Europe.

"Imperial Russia sought to escape from internal difficulties in a foreign war.

The Difference in 1939

But of 1939, it said:

"The axis powers possess greater military and industrial strength than any Western powers.

"Russia today finds herself in the situation of a man who has had a stroke and now fears great physical exertion.

Moslems Riot On Bombay's First Dry Day

55 Persons Injured; Hindus Stoned; 10 P.M. Curfew Ordered

By the Associated Press

Bombay, India, Aug. 1.—The Bombay government tonight imposed a 10 p. m. curfew for 14 days in an effort to prevent further violence following today's riots in which 55 persons were injured in fighting over the new prohibition law.

Moslems on a holiday parade stoned Hindu onlookers who, as followers of Mahatma Gandhi, have supported the dry law, first to be imposed for any large community since the United States repealed prohibition.

The Moslems, although abstainers by religion, were led by Parsees, who control most of the city's liquor trade and fear that loss of city revenues will lead to higher taxes.

The police stepped in with their batons, but when those proved ineffective before the mob they drew pistols and fired. Six persons were wounded by bullets; others nursed cuts and bruises from sticks and stones.

The injured included 21 special constables who had volunteered to help enforce the law and six regular policemen.

Soviet Attacks 'Loophole' in British Offer

London Admits Alliance Plans Are Snagged on Baltic Aggression Issue

By the United Press.

Moscow, Aug. 1.—The Soviet government asserted tonight in a statement issued through the official Tass Agency, that negotiations for a tri-power alliance are stalled because Great Britain's proposals would "leave a loophole for aggression" against the Baltic states.

The announcement, one of the few issued since the start of the Anglo-French-Soviet negotiations 16 weeks ago, was made in connection with statements made in the British House of Commons Monday when the British Government announced the immediate dispatch of Anglo-French staff missions to Moscow.

Tass asserted Richard Austen Butler, parliamentary undersecretary of foreign affairs, "in his speech to Parliament, stated that the British government had proceeded with the utmost dispatch to eliminate outstanding differences between the U. S. S. R. and Britain and that the main question had been whether we should encroach on the independence of the Baltic states."

Distortion Charged

Tass quoted Butler as saying:

"I agree that we should not do so and that difference forms the main reason for the delay in the negotiations."

The Soviet agency then added:

"Tass is authorized to state that if Butler really said the above then he distorted the attitude of the Soviet government. In reality, the difference is not whether to encroach or not to encroach on the independence of the Baltic states because both sides stand for guaranteeing this independence, but that no loophole should be left in the formula for 'indirect aggression' against the independence of the Baltic states by the aggressors.

"One of the reasons for the delay in the negotiations is that the British formula leaves such a loophole for aggression."

British Prime Minister Chamberlain and Butler both admitted the Moscow talks had been snagged by a controversy as to the definition of what would constitute indirect aggression against Finland, Esthonia and Latvia.

The Soviets want the projected alliance to be effective in the event of an internal Nazi coup, altering the political status of any of the Baltic states. The British are reluctant to commit themselves to a treaty provision which might lead to "intervention" in Baltic internal affairs.

British Reach Paris Today

Paris, Aug. 1 (AP).—The British military mission to Moscow was expected to reach Paris tomorrow for preliminary strategy talks with members of a similar French mission before both groups went on to Soviet Russia later this week.

Croats Threaten To Secede Even At Cost of War

Kupinec, Yugoslavia, Aug. 1 (AP).—Dr. Vladko Machek today threatened to pull Croatia out of Yugoslavia—even though "it will probably mean a world war"—unless his people are quickly granted complete home rule.

A lieutenant of the 60-year-old leader said that 450,000 Croatian "peasant foot guards" are supporting his demands already made on the Serb-conducted government at Belgrade.

Machek declared bluntly that Crotia would secede from Yugoslavia unless his autonomy demands were met.

"All right—Germany then—let her come and make order. Someone must make order in Yugoslavia. If Belgrade can not make order in Yugoslavia, Germany can."

Esme Howard, Former Envoy Of Britain to U. S., Dies at 75

played a prominent part in the defeat of the Spanish Armada. The family later turned Protestant, but Lord Howard returned to the faith of his fathers when he married in 1898, Lady Isabella, daughter of Prince Giustiniani-Bandini. They had five sons.

He entered the diplomatic service in 1885, by examination, after being educated at Harrow. His first assignment was as secretary to Lord Carnarvon, then Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

Next he was in Rome for two years, and in 1888 went to Berlin as third secretary. In 1892 he retired from the service, and stood unsuccessfully for Parliament. In 1894 and 1895 he was private secretary to Foreign Secretary Lord Kimberly.

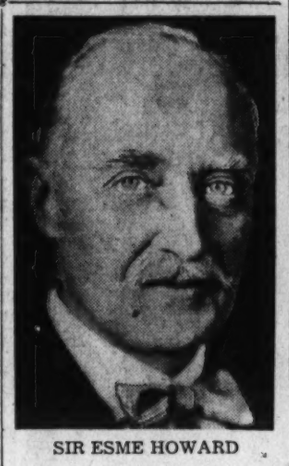
Served in Boer War

During the Boer War, Lord Howard served in the Imperial Yeomanry, winning a decoration.

After the Boer war he re-entered the diplomatic service and his carreer was marked by advancements which eventually made him one of the most distinguished diplomats the British service had developed in many years. His first assignment after the South African war was as honorary secretary at Rome.

In 1903 he was appointed consul general for Crete and held that post until 1906, when he was transferred to Washington as councillor of the embassy. After two years at the American capital he served three years as consul general in Hungary; two years as minister to Syitzerland and six years as minister to Sweden.

The last assignment was regarded as the most difficult of Lord Howard's diplomatic career. It was during the war years, and because of the strong sympathy for Germany in Sweden, the post was regarded as one of the greatest importance to England.



SIR ESME HOWARD

He was selected a member of the British delegation to the Paris peace conference, and in 1919 was raised to the rank of ambassador and was sent to Madrid. He remained there until he was named to succeed Sir Auckland Geddes as British Ambassador at Washington.

Sir Esme was created a companion of St. Michael and St. George in 1906, and in the same year was made commander of the oya! Victorian Order. He was created knight commander of St. Michael and St. George in 1916, and knight grand cross of the same order in 1923. He also was honored as knight commander of the Bath in 1919.

Yarnell Honored, Leaving Shanghai

Shanghai, Aug. 1 (AP).—Diplomats and naval officers or other countries joined several hundred Americans tonight in an unusual waterfront farewell to Admiral Harry E. Yarnell as he left for the United States with his wife after turning over command of the United States Asiatic Fleet.

A detachment of United States Marines formed a guard of honor as the Yarnells boarded a launch to go down the Whangpoo River to board the liner President Coolidge.

Haldane Offers To Test Steel Air Raid Shelters

London Aug. 1.—Prof. J. B. S. Haldane offered today to sit inside one of the 2,500,000 steel air raid shelters which the British government has ordered for its citizens, while high explosives were set off outside to test its efficienoy.

Haldane studied air raid defense during the civil war in Spain, and last month sealed himself for 14½ hours in a steel chamber to determine how the 99 men imprisoned in the submarine Thetis met their death.

"The government ought either to investigate the question thoroughly, or else say, 'We don't know whether people in the shelters will be killed or not'—and then shut up," he declared.

Bar Leader DeniesLawFees Are Too High

Cites Low Incomes in Profession to Refute Jackson Statement

Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson's recent statement that lawyers' fees are too high was indignantly denied yesterday by Edwin M. Otterbourg before the Commercial Law League convention in the Wardman Park Hotel.

Otterburg, who is chairman of committees on unauthorized practice of law for both the American Bar Association and the New York County Lawyers' Association, charged numerous types of corporations and individuals with interfering with the practice of law by offering nonprofessional advice.

Rebutting Jackson's claim that "those of moderate incomes" were without legal service because they could not afford it, Otterbourg asserted that such persons "rely upon the illegal advice of some corporate officer, agent, contact man, tax expert, accountant, broker, salesman, or what not," and find it more expensive in the end.

Low Incomes Cited

He pointed to the low incomes of lawyers, 42.8 per cent of whom received less than $2,000 in 1936, and 81 per cent less than $5,000, as evidence that fees are not too high. "Can anyone believe that with such an economic condition prevailing, lawyers as a class . . . overcharge the public?" he asked.

Admitting that "the public of moderate means" to some extent "stays away from the lawyers," Ottenbourg named four additional causes:

Lack of public understanding of the necessity, as well as the availability of legal services;

Continuous attacks on the profession and the law by those who seek to weaken its usefulness to the general public;

Misrepresentation of law and lawyers in public portrayals of screen, stage and friction; and

Over-emphasis in the public mind of isolated disbarment proceedings and wrong doing by reason of which the entire bar is condemned.

Round Table Discussion

A round-table discussion of new decisions and experiences under the Chandler bankruptcy act, over which Frank W. Stonecipher presided, was a feature of the afternoon sessions. Judge Joseph A. Moynihan, of Detroit, led a symposium on improved trial procedure, and Stanley K. Oldden was chairman of a discussion of business methods under the league's statement of principles.

Committee reports concluded the afternoon's meetings, and nominations for officers were presented in the evening.

Richard V. Gilbert Named Economist Aide to Hopkins

Richard V. Gilbert, nationally known Harvard University economist, has been chosen by Secretary of Commerce Hopkins as one of his economic advisers, it was learned yesterday.

Gilbert's appointment is the first of several more departmental business, economic and policy advisers whom the Secretary is expected to name later this week. The additions to the Secretary's staff were made possible by an appropriation increase of $160,000 for the purpose.

Gilbert, who is 36, graduated from Harvard in 1923, obtaining his Ph. D. in economics in 1930 from the Harvard Business School. Since 1924 he has been an instructor and tutor at Harvard and Radcliffe and from 1934 to 1939 has also served as an associate professor at the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy in Medford, Mass. He saw Government service in the summer of 1937 when he was a senior economic analyst in the Treasury.

10 Playgrounds Chosen to Open announced yesterday following a poll of Board of Education members. Miss Sibyl Baker, former director of playgrounds, was named as Community Center director, at $3,500 a year. The four assistant recreation directors are Richard S. Tennyson, former assistant superintendent of playgrounds, $2,600; Harry English, former Community Center men's and boys' activities supervisor, $2,200; Thomas J. Anderson, colored, Howard University professor, $2,600, and John L. Young, colored, $2,000.

May Seek to End Jobs

It was learned also yesterday that the District Commissioners may recommend legislation at the next session of Congress abolishing the positions in the Community Center Department, including the community secretaries. Although the agency was consolidated with the former District playground department in the 1940 appropriation act, the names of the positions in the centers were specifically mentioned, which, according to some officials, virtually undid the purpose of the consolidating act. It is known that the commissioners are giving consideration to the subject and may draft legislative proposals to complete every phase of the consolidation next year.

In Capital Night Clubs

Me and my shadow. "Tiny" Hill watches Ozzie Osborne hammer the vibraharp in Glen Echo's Spanish Ballroom

AUGUST EVENING. 7:30. Scene, The Lotus. Irene Healy waltzes out in a tremendous hoopskirt then, presto! she suddenly shoots up to 11-foot height right before your eyes, keeps right on dancing. We won't tell you how she does it, but it isn't with stilts . . . The Abdallah Girls do a rope-skipping dance with diamond ropes. Kindergarten was never like this . . . Buddy Shaner sings his own favorite song, "Strange Enchantment" . . . All of the Dixieland Swingers—Ross, Frankie, Bix, Marty and Jimmy—go into a frenzied "jam session," tearing "Well, All Right" limb from limb. The music gets so hot you forget the Lotus has a cooling system . . . The Abdallah lasses bounce out in a climaxing cyclone of human pyramid building and tumbling . . . Manager Dick Lamm smiles, "Well, All Right!" Correct, Mr. Lamm.

8:45. Glen Echo. "Tiny" Hill, biggest orchestra leader in the country, stops clambering onto the podium to ask us if we know any Alpha Gamma Delta girls, if so, to ask them to come out and see him. "Tiny" is the only brother in the A. G. D. sorority. He was initiated into the Lambda Chapter at Northwestern University; had to scrub floors as part of initiation. Confidential "Tiny" and his boys didn't get to Glen Echo until 8:30 on Monday. Nobody knew where they were and they were due to play at 9. Did Echo's Col. Leonard Schloss have kittens? No. Wildcats.

10:00. Shoreham Terrace. Press Agent Joe Deuprey comes up with the big news that Nelson Goodrich (upper part of the acrobatic act of Nelson and Goodrich) looks like Robert Taylor, that dancers Gary Leon and Tut Mace weigh, respectively, 200 and 98 pounds . . . The show has the usual Shoreham polish and sharpness . . . The heralded dancer, Key Taylor, proves a saucy red-headed enchantress with Myrna Loy freckles . . . Leon and Mace are dance sophisticates . . . We meet a Shoreham resident who says, "Sa-ay, the Ranee of Baria was here the other evening. She was wearing one of her native saris." Page Schiapperelli! Bulletin. Shoreham's amusement manager, Max Lowe, tells us that Capt. "Speedy" Phoenix, high diving daredevil, will return to the terrace on August 28. Good news!

11:00. Brown Derby. All the lads and girls having a time for themselves . . . Al and George horsing around happily . . . We meet the new Mrs. Al Simmonds. She's little, brunette and very cute . . . It turns out that George was Al's best man. Whatta wedding it must have been!

Twenty thousand people must be right. Myrah and Walker Lorenz (Roger Smith roof garden) forecast the future of more than 20,000 people in one year. That was the period when they held forth in a large department store.

TRICKS IN TUNES: Mayfair's Art Barker often adapts his music to the gaits of customers as they enter. The effects are something swell.

"If You See My Aunt" as sung in Spanish by Bert Bernath in the Carlton Lounge, is one of the most sparkling ditties on tap. But it isn't risque. Or is it?

"Aincha Comin' Out?" is coming out boiling from the bandstand of the Rainbow Room's Meyer Davis Orchestra. If the boys don't look out, they'll blow out the pressure gauge one of these eves.

Neptune Room's Four Girls of Note have a way all their own of playing "La Cucharaca." A very fine way, too.

"Comes Love," one of the catchiest tunes from "Yokel Boy," is being vocaled brightly by Hi Hat's Jack Manning, Angie Rodante and Al Lewis.

"Sophisticated Hula," being done by the Cocomos in the King Cole Room, is a hula number to end all hula numbers. Both sizzling and comical.

"Back to Back," as played by the Metronome Room Penguins, benefits by a starchy Bill Dunmore arrangement accentuating the tune's flippancy.

Whenever Artie Humes, of the Lounge Riviera, picks up his trumpet, it'll pay you to sit and listen, no matter what the tune. He's a top-notcher and a honey when he goes to town in swing time.

SCREWBALL CLUB. Harold Veo and his orchestra and the Maryland Gardens entertainers have formed their own "Screwball Club." They all have little gold pins showing appropriate insignia.

NIBBLING NOTES. If you get out to O'Donnell's Farms too late for a plantation dinner, try one of their "tid-bit meals." The Long Island rarebit is mighty nice. . . . Both refreshing and delicious are the summer versions of chop suey being served at Bamboo Gardens. Among them are fresh vegetable chop suey and scallop c. s. . . . Madrillon's paella Valencia is something to send cablegrams about. It's a classic Spanish dish including chicken, shellfish, sausages and a dozen kinds of vegetables. SHRIMPS AHOY! It's shrimp feast night again this evening at the A. T. & S. barbecue. You can eat a peck of the little pinkies for two bits. The limit is your capacity.

Hungary Voices Astonishment at Border Fighting

Budapest, Aug. 1 (AP).—The Hungarian government expressed its "astonishment" tonight over three nights of border fighting between Hungarian and Rumanian guards in which four Hungarians were reported to have been wounded.

The Hungarian statement proposed that a mixed military commission be named to fix responsibility for the continued skirmishing along the Tisza River in Ruthenia.

(In Bucharest, the Rumanian government charged that Hungary was "entirely responsible" for the clashes and declared it would forbid Hungarian raftsmen from using the Tisza until the Hungarian government takes "severe measures to end these regrettable frontier incidents.")

Senate Passes 193 Bills in Single Session

Fails, However, to Reach House Record Of 244 Set Monday

The Senate yesterday passed 193 bills, but failed to reach the House's record, set on Monday, when 244 measures were approved.

The Senate voted to make the Civilian Conservation Corps a permanent agency of the Government. The House recently passed legislation to extend the life of the corps for five years. The differences may be ironed out in a conference.

Other Measures Were Passed to:

Authorize a preliminary investigation by the Interstate Commerce Commission of the feasibility of "postalized" railroad passenger rates.

Enable the Secretaries of War and Navy to award contracts for new fighting planes and their equipment to the "three lowest bidders."

Age Limit Scrapped

Permit appointment of second lieutenants in the Army Air Corps Reserve without regard to the present 30-year age limit.

Permit the Home Owners Loan Corporation to extend from 15 to 25 years the period of amortization of its loans.

Increase the control of the Interstate Commerce Commission over finances of railroads and their subsidiaries. The measure would forbid the investment of railroad funds in securities except with ICC approval and would require ICC approval of the issuance of securities by railroad subsidiaries.

Broaden the Maritime Commission's authority to requisition privately owned vessels during a national emergency. A Senate committee expressed belief that "the mere knowledge on the part of a possible enemy that the President is vested with the authority given in this bill may prove to be a restraining factor and tend to preserve peace."

Deportation Expedited

Expedite deportation of criminal aliens and those engaged in espionage or sabotage.

Permit establishment of the rank of lieutenant general for officers who hold the post as commander of any of the four armies.

Direct the Secretary of Agriculture to negotiate with the Mexican government for eradication of the pink boll weevil.

Allot $5,000,000 a year to the Department of Agriculture for development of foreign markets for farm commodities.

Require installation of sprinkler fire prevention systems, "adequate" life preservers and safety devices for steamers carrying 50 passengers or more.

Belgium to Seek New U. S. Treaty

Brussels, Aug. 1 (AP).—The newspaper Libre Belgique said today that negotiations aiming at revision of the 1938 commercial treaty with the United States would begin next week.

The paper said the negotiations were not concerned with any exchange of raw materials, such as the United States-British agreement to exchange stores of rubber and cotton. Instead, it was said, Belgium hopes to obtain some trade that formerly went to Czecho-Slovakia before the German protectorate was established.

Board Orders Vote Between Auto Unions

Ballots to Affect 78,000; General Motors, Packard Omitted

By the United Press.

The National Labor Relations Board acted yesterday to substitute ballots for picket-line violence in settling a bitter battle between the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations for supremacy in the automobile industry.

The board decided to settle by a vote of the workers involved in the dispute between the A. F. L. and C. I. O. factions, each of which claims to be the only legal "United Automobile Workers of America," with full rights to the agreements negotiated with automobile manufacturers after the sit-down strike wave of 1937.

The NLRB ordered elections among approximately 78,000 workers employed by the Chrysler Corporation, the Briggs Manufacturing Co. and the Motors Products Co., but did not announce what action, if any, it will take on the requests of General Motors Corporation and the Packard Motor Car Co. for similar votes among their workers.

Inquiry Funds Voted

The labor board rulings highlighted a busy day on the Washington labor front. Other developments were:

The House appropriated $50,000 for a special investigation of the NLRB by a five-man committee, which Speaker William B. Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, may appoint later this week. Representative Howard W. Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, is expected to head the committee since he sponsored the resolution authorizing the inquiry.

Representative Clare Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, introduced a resolution calling for an investigation of the C. I. O. and all its affiliates.

Hoffman also introduced a bill to make it a criminal offense for any person to use coercion, intimidation, force or show of force to prevent production or shipment of articles in interstate or foreign commerce.

The C. I. O. began its drive to organize the building trades, and the United Construction Workers organizing committee promulgated rules and regulations designed to attract workers from the A. F. L.'s entrenched and powerful building trades unions.

Both Claim Victory

Battles between the two U. A. W. factions already have been waged inside factories, and outside on the picket line, and automobile manufacturers admit candidly that they anticipate additional trouble this fall when 1940 automobile production gets under way.

The polls were ordered over protests of the A. F. L. faction, but the board split two to one in sustaining the A. F. L.'s request that the elections be conducted on a plant by plant basis instead of a single vote for each corporation. The C. I. O. sought a single vote for each corporation in the belief that its claimed corporation-wide majority would freeze out the A. F. L. at individual plants where it might have a majority.

As a result, each side claimed that the decision was a victory.

Police Stoned Taking Workers Through C.I.O. Auto Pickets

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

When State troopers arrived at South Barre, Mass., to break up fist fighting that flared during strike at the Barre Wool Combing Co. yesterday, they got this much appreciation from Mary Patracone, 19, who excels in the technique of rending "the bird"

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 1.—Picket line violence and an indicated revolt against an American Federation of Labor move to dispatch its workers into struck plants marked the C. I. O.-United Automobile Workers' strike at General Motors plants here today.

Policemen were ordered on ten-hour shifts tonight, following the stoning of 50 officers engaged in conducting 35 nonstriking workers from one plant, and meanwhile two A. F. of L. unions protested plans to pass through the C. I. O.'s picket lines.

The fracas, at which several persons were injured and eight arrested, took place at a machine and die unit of Fisher Body Corporation.

R. J. Thomas, president of the U. A. W.-C. I. O., tonight blamed the violence here and in Cleveland on General Motors' attitude and "stalling" in negotiations.

They relieved some of the approximately 300 men marooned overnight in the sprawling East Side factory.

In Washington Representative Hoffman (Republican), Michigan, urged House Democrats to get Attorney General Murphy to investigate whether besieging of nonstrikers—many stayed in the plant overnight—constituted a civil liberties violation. Murphy had referred a C. I. O. protest against "unnecessary violence" to the U. S. District Attorney at Cleveland.

A dozen General Motors Units are involved in the C. I. O.-U. A. W. walkout to enforce demands for a separate agreement covering skilled tool and die workers.

Common Pleas Judge John P. Dempsey delayed today until Thursday a hearing on the company's demand for an injunction against mass picketing.

Cleveland, Aug. 1 (AP).—Mass demonstrations ended and tension eased today at General Motors' strike-bound Fisher Body plant.

A number of nonstrikers went to work through entrances where rioting yesterday sent 46 persons to hospitals in clashes between police and C. I. O. United Automobile Workers and union sympathizers.

ICC Hopes To Modernize Freight Rates

General Investigation Of Rail and Water Class Tariffs Ordered

By the Associated Press

The Interstate Commerce Commission announced yesterday it would attempt to bring the Nation's complicated freight rate structure up to date.

It ordered a general investigation of rail and water class rates, except in Mountain Pacific territory and on transcontinental traffic, and also an investigation of freight classifications by rail and water. One official indicated that he thought the investigation might require several years.

The commission said the investigation would be made "with a view to prescribing such rates and classifications as may be found to be justified."

The investigation will cover the intra-and inter-territorial class rate structures in Northern, Southern, Southwestern and Western trunk-line territories.

Frequent Criticism

Class rates apply to all shipments which do not move under commodity rates. They apply to traffic generally called merchandise, while commodity rates apply generally to heavy, low-rated commodities such as coal.

One commission official estimated that about 50 per cent of the tonnage in northern territory moved on class rates, but that the percentage was considerably smaller in other territories.

The present class rate structure frequently has been criticized. The South especially has objected to the class rates applying to shipments into the North. These inter-territorial rates are considerably higher than the rates within the North. The South contends it should have the same rates on its shipments into the North, mileage considered, as apply on shipments entirely within the North.

Patchwork Decision

Commissioner Charles D. Mahaffie long has advocated a general investigation of the class rate structure. As far back as 1934 he called a decision in a Western trunk-line case, "another piece of patchwork on an obsolete structure." He has made similar comment in more recent cases.

"In the meantime," the I. C. C. said, "efforts now being made by carriers' and shippers' organizations to revise class rate structures in the light of present conditions, and to simplify classifications, should proceed. To the extent these efforts are successful, the magnitude of the task confronting all concerned in the investigations will be decreased."

Senate Votes To Tighten Patent Laws

Five of Measures Ready for President, Sixth Goes to House

By the Associated Press

The Senate approved yesterday a half dozen bills carrying out recommendations of the Federal Monopoly Committee for speedier and more efficient patent law administration.

Five of the measures have been passed by the House and now go to President Roosevelt. These would:

Reduce from two years to one year the period within which an inventor may make public use of his invention before filing application for a patent.

Revision of "interference practices" and reducing the number of hearings which may be held. Chairman O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, said applications for these hearings had been used for extending the life of patents.

Abolish so-called "renewal applications" for patents.

Extend the authority of the patent commissioner to enable him to require an applicant to respond to an official action within less than the current statutory period of six months.

Reduce the period within which to copy claims from an issued patent for the purpose of asserting priority.

The measure which must be approved by the House before going to the President would limit the life of a patent to 20 years from the date of filing an application. Under present law patents run 17 years from date of issuance, but the Monopoly Committee found that this procedure made possible delays as long as 40 years, O'Mahoney said.

Municipal Judges

President Roosevelt showed good judgment in reappointing Judges Nathan Cayton and Ellen K. Raedy to serve new terms in the Municipal Court. When judges have rendered satisfactory service on the bench it is sound policy to continue them in the service. Indeed, a judge is likely to become more and not less competent with experience, until he reaches an age where he is no longer equal to the onerous task of administering justice.

Judge Cayton, in particular, has rendered the community distinguished service. His sponsorship of the Small-Claims Court marked him as a progressive and able jurist who is eager to shape the machinery of justice to the needs of the poor as well as those in comfortable circumstances. The Small-Claims Court has proved to be an outstanding success. Judge Cayton is now directing his efforts to the establishment of a special division of the court to handle landlord-tenant cases. For that reason alone, aside from his able work on the bench, his nomination ought to be speedily confirmed.

Reappointment of Judge Raedy was in keeping with the tradition that the Municipal Court roster should include a woman. She has shown herself to be a conscientious judge and has the advantage of being a native Washingtonian. Her experience during the last four years has notably enhanced her prestige on the bench.

It is reported that a reappointment for Presiding Judge George C. Aukam is contingent upon the enactment of a bill providing him with retirement pay. Judge Aukam has reached an age at which he may reasonably seek retirement. But it would be an obvious injustice to deny him a new term, after 32 years of service in this court, if Congress fails to grant him retirement benefits.

The Dirksen Plan

Convincing evidence that reorganization of the District government is not a dead issue may be found in the interest members of Congress are manifesting in the problem. Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, has asked local officials to present their views on the subject in a series of conferences with himself and Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee, during the Congressional recess. Representative Dirksen has offered a reorganization plan of his own.

If the local community gives the movement the support it deserves, these efforts are almost certain to come to a head during the next session of Congress. A number of Senators, as indicated by Senator Capper's speech of yesterday, are genuinely interested in lifting from the District the unreasonable handicaps under which it now operates. And, despite the delay of the Kennedy bill, the movement appears to have made substantial progress on the House side.

As a substitute for the Kennedy bill, drafted by a group of experts in municipal organization, the five-man District Commission proposed by Representative Dirksen has little to commend it. His plans for giving broader powers to the local governing body, and of requiring public meetings at which citizens could express their views on local policies are all to the good. But the division of municipal authority among five commissioners—one at the head of each major department—would be a step backward instead of forward.

If this five-man body were assigned only the policy-making function, with administrative responsibility left to a single manager under its control, it might prove to be satisfactory. But to divide administrative tasks among five officials would probably lead to greater confusion than now exists. The crying need in Washington is for consolidation of municipal powers.

For much the same reason, Mr. Dirksen's suggestion that local appropriating and taxing powers remain in Congress is unsatisfactory. Without control over its own budget, a city has little opportunity to formulate any substantial policies of its own. It is highly probable that Congress will continue to legislate in detail for the District so long as it retains the obligation of passing annual appropriation bills for the city.

In spite of its inadequacy, however, the Dirksen plan may aid the cause of reorganization. Only by the analysis of many reorganization schemes on their merits is Congress likely to arrive at a final conclusion as to what is best for the District. It is to be hoped that other Congressmen as well as local officials will now bring forward their proposals. If these do not prove to be clearly superior to the Kennedy bill, the effect should be to consolidate support behind that measure.

Sword Or Olive Branch

During recent months Great Britain has moved a long distance away from Munich. But if the policy of "appeasement," as practiced in 1938, is now out of the picture, the hope of peace and the determination to work for it have not been abandoned by the Chamberlain government.

There can be very little doubt of Britain's present determination to resist any further aggressions in Europe. That is the meaning and the purpose of the alliances made with Poland and Turkey, the guarantees of support extended to Rumania and Greece, the introduction of conscription, the enormous increase in British military expenditures, the quasi-mobilization of the British fleet, and the negotiations for an alliance with Russia.

On the other hand, both Premier Chamberlain and Lord Halifax, the foreign secretary, have not hesitated to invite criticism by ceaselessly advocating a peaceful settlement with the totalitarian powers, provided that it would really stem the drift to war and reverse the juggernaut of rearmament. They have been facing Hitler and Mussolini with a sword in one hand and an olive branch in the other.

Both of these instruments were held out by the Prime Minister in his speech preceding the adjournment of Parliament. Mr. Chamberlain made an earnest plea for a halt in war preparations and in the "war of words" which rages with increasing intensity throughout the world.

"There is no question," he said, "that could not and should not be solved by peaceful discussion." And he properly emphasized that if war should come "nothing is more certain than that victor and vanquished alike would glean a gruesome harvest of human suffering and misery."

Under different circumstances such statements might give the impression that the British government is not averse to another Munich. But this conclusion is impossible in view of the simultaneous announcement of the opening of military staff consultations, in Moscow, by British, French and Russian officers.

In the normal course of events, staff consultations follow and do not precede the conclusion of a political agreement. That is what happened when, for instance, Great Britain and Poland recently decided to pool their strength to resist aggression. But when Moscow suggested the advisability of joint military planning concurrent with the continuance of negotiations for a political agreement, Mr. Chamberlain promptly agreed.

It was, moreover, a striking coincidence that this announcement by Mr. Chamberlain came on the twenty-fifth anniversary of Russia's entry into the World War. Between the Russia and the Great Britain of prewar days there was, as there is now, a long background of misunderstanding and suspicion. But then as now the two nations were driven together by common fear of Germany, sufficient to dissolve their mutual mistrust.

It took time to conclude the Anglo-Russian entente of 1907. A similar effort is taking time now. Because almost four months have elapsed since Great Britain and Russia first began to consider the possibility of alliance many have become cynical as to the outcome. It is the more apposite for Mr. Chamberlain to point out that the Anglo-Russian convention of 1907 took 15 months to conclude and the Anglo-French entente of 1904, nine months. Indeed, the very fact that the current Anglo-Russian negotiations have survived so many disappointments suggests that the forces drawing the two nations together are greater than the factors which tend to keep them apart. And the greatest of these forces is a common desire to preserve the peace.

This is the primary purpose of British policy in all its manifestations. It is basic in the newly-created alliances. It is also basic in the eagerness with which Chamberlain seizes every opportunity to impress upon Hitler that, while determined to bar further forceful conquest, Great Britain is not an enemy but a friend of Germany. Far from advocating repressive encirclement he would willingly co-operate with the Fuehrer in any effort to "escape from the present nightmare and come once again into the sunlight of peace."

The Welfare Director

Robert E. Bondy has at least two notable qualifications for the post of public welfare director in the District. Having been active in the civic life of this community for 19 years, he is familiar with its peculiar problems. And, having served as an executive officer of the American Red Cross during that period, he should be qualified to handle the basic elements of the public welfare office from the moment he takes it over.

If his nomination for this job is approved by the District Commissioners, however, Mr. Bondy will find the management of Washington's welfare activities a more strenuous undertaking than his work for the Red Cross. He will be concerned not only with the administration of relief, but also with various child welfare functions and with management of the District's penal institutions. Few, if any, other executive positions in the District service carry such a heavy responsibility.

There seems to be little doubt, however, that Mr. Bondy would prove equal to the task. His record and experience inspire confidence. And if he gains unanimous support within the Board of Commissioners, as he already has done in the Board of Public Welfare, he will assume his important task under the most favorable circumstances.

Revolt On Spending

The coup de grace administered to President Roosevelt's spending-lending bill by the House yesterday is a reasonable sequel to the action of the Senate on Monday. Actually the Senate had vitiated the movement to invest an enormous sum of Government money to stimulate recovery. The House simply refused to consider a program that had already been torn to shreds.

Considering what the Senate did to the bill, no one can be very sorry that the House threw it into the waste basket. Even the President was critical of the enormous farm subsidies provided in the regular agricultural bill, with no means of supplying revenue to cover them. When the Senate converted the lending bill into another glorified farm benefit measure, and surrounded it by various restrictions, the White House must have seen that it fell under much the same condemnation that was properly directed at the agriculture supply bill.

Because of the heavy representation of rural areas in the Senate, that body was willing to accept the farm-lending features of the bill. The House, being less susceptible to pressure from agricultural groups, saw that unrestrained spending for the benefit of farmers is just as dangerous as other roads to bankruptcy. So it made a clean sweep of the entire program. It would accept no half-way measure merely for the sake of permitting the Administration to save face. That stand is as notable for the courage behind it as for the good judgment it reflects.

Several factors have contributed to this complete rout of the Administration forces on the spending issue. Probably of first importance is the growing concern over the fiscal policy which has piled deficit upon deficit for nine consecutive years. If that policy had resulted in recovery, and had brought an end to unemployment, there would be much to be said in its favor. But its disappointing results have shattered the faith of Congress as well as the people—if they ever had any such faith—in the efficacy of pump-priming.

Undoubtedly this revolt against a new outpouring of Government funds was strengthened by the current pick-up in industrial activity. Even those who retain confidence in deficit financing as the way to prosperity found it difficult to devise plausible arguments for another shot in the arm at this time. The House vote in particular might be interpreted as a desire to postpone the entire issue until the 1940 session.

But various other motives also found expression in the House vote. Congressmen want to go home. Many of them have been fretting over adjournment for several weeks. They were properly annoyed over the injection of such a far-reaching issue into the last weeks of the session.

No doubt a stronger desire was that on the part of numerous Congressmen to demonstrate their independence of executive control. Both houses have experienced an unmistakable revolt against much that the New Deal stands for. They are no longer willing to dance whenever the Administration calls the tune. Congress is now determined to call the tune itself and make the Administration dance. And the tunes it has been selecting have none of the harmony that might be conducive to a third term.

Most persons who are said to be acting the fool aren't acting at all.

You might as well lend money to kinsfolk as to bet on a "sure thing."

People differ. Some object to a fan-dancer; others to the fan.

Pollyanna's Return

From the Decatur (Ill.) Review.

Over 3,000 people at Fans Field on ladies' night furnished a picture of the change which has come to this community within the last three months.

People on the whole are better minded. They no longer talk of the depression. The women are tastily attired. The men wear clothing consistent with comfort, verging slightly to the dishabille. There is a happy exchange of comment among men and among families without the formality of an introduction.

The pavilion at a baseball park is a great community melting pot. Residential preference is forgotten, differences of the business day are out of mind.

In the public conveyances, too, there is a change to a more optimistic atmosphere. The man who used to have the public with him as he voiced complaint after complaint to the bus driver now finds the tables turned and the public smiling at his imagined grievances rather than at the embarrassment of the driver.

Whatever may be the attitude in the home or in business associations, it is certain that among the people in public places there has been an unfeigned increase toward happy disposition.

That's That!

War And Peace

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the course of human events, peace or war is a question sometimes confronting many serious-minded persons, but they seldom agree as to the means of preserving peace or participating in a war. They cannot agree partly because their concept of peace and their attitude toward war are different. With most of them, it may be admitted, there is hardly any serious study of the causes of peace or thorough understanding of the consequences of war.

This, in my opinion, largely explains why there is in America an apparently chaotic trend of argument against the foreign policy President Franklin D. Roosevelt advocates.

And, strange though it seems, a cause of peace is at the same time one of war. For instance, power politics directed by some statesmen and advanced by all militarists is a peace factor in world affairs, but it also serves to bring about international war. It is a fact, a tendency, a problem which must affect the American Nation. It is a challenge to America and America, as a civilization and a continent, merely for her own preservation, cannot afford to ignore it.

Another cause of peace which also is one of war may be called non-participation, abstentation, isolation, exclusiveness, pacifism, nonviolence, self-sufficiency. The fall of the great Celestial Empire can be traced to this cause, which was rather remote but vital. I recall what Theodore Roosevelt spoke about Chinafying America a generation ago. I do quietly realize now how correct he was in analyzing the reasons for the weakness of my country and how moderate he was in so warning his American people and government.

As he said then, no man deserves respect unless he assumes responsibility to his fellowmen and so no nation can long survive unless that nation bears responsibility to the family of nations. It seems quite urgent for us, who adhere to the teaching of Jesus, Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, to comprehend our own common responsibility. Let not the question of war or peace excite our inferiority complex, but solve resolutely the problem of Christian responsibility and American duty to mankind. There is no need of superiority complex to build up the American leadership in world affairs. What is needed is moral resourcefulness which shall be strong without fear and full of love for the Fatherhood of God.

Nepotism

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I express my hearty approval of the sentiments of H. L. P. and H. E. T., as published in The Post recently, relative to husbands and wives in the employ of the Government, both Federal and D. C. In my opinion it's time for a halt being called by those in authority on such unfairness and injustices as now exist. These conditions are among the most objectionable abuses the unemployed have to contend with in their efforts toward securing employment.

In my opinion Congress should enact legislation correcting and prohibiting such unfairness. If unable during the present session, then Congress should act in the early stages of the 1940 session. I might further state that the restriction and enforcements should apply to both the active workers, many of whom seek outside work after office hours, and those retired and drawing pensions, who also seek and accept other employment after retirement, much to the disadvantage of the unemployed in many ways.

I further believe the same exactions should apply to all business enterprises where large forces of people are employed and the same conditions exist. I think entirely too much nepotism is prevalent in the Government service, also in industry. HENRY F. ASH.

America And The Far East

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Of the two nations, China and Japan, it is Japan which is the backward one. It is the Chinese who have their feet firmly grounded in the twentieth century; it is the Chinese, not the Japanese, who are going somewhere; it is with the Chinese that the hope for a great new Asiatic civilization rests.

In the development of an intelligent policy we have, however, had not much more than wishful thinking from the White House, no leadership whatever from the Department of State, and from Congress a ghastly display of muddled thought which brings us one step closer to dictatorship by showing that Congress cannot be trusted with anything, in spite of the effort of a small and gallant group of both political parties, and in both Houses, who have tried to substitute logical policy for this neutrality nonsense.

Americans were disgusted at Munich; they will be similarly disgusted with the deal which the British make in China. But before being critical they have to ask themselves how much they have themselves contributed to these surrenders to international banditry. Our action has been throughout undignified, illogical and thoroughly dangerous to our own peace and security.

Whether we like it or not, America is the most powerful nation on earth. Its action or nonaction alike has world-wide repercussion. Its foreign policy should have the aim of making the world safe for Americans, for American ideals and for American trade. Specious neutrality does not contribute to this end; a definite stand against aggression and international lawlessness would. And the first requisite of this stand is that we cease participating in the Japanese assault on China.

We must remember that in the eyes of international polity the Japanese army in China is a bandit army. It has no rights which anybody is in law bound to respect. Since Japan refuses to accept the responsibilities of comity among nations, she is not entitled to the privileges of such comity. A Japanese soldier has no more right to hold up an American at the point of a gun in Tientsin than any other highwayman. American condonation of this kind of gangsterism and her complicity in it will be to our posterity one of the sorrier pages of our history.

Denunciation of the trade treaty of 1911 is a very encouraging sign. For this those of us who are interested in peace rather more than in neutrality are grateful. We have to recognize, however, that we may be seeing only the phantom of false morning. Only an embargo on materials for war purposes to Japan, a boycott of Japanese goods and positive help to China will make the aggressors realize that America is really in earnest.

Mr. Sayre's Appointment

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Filipino political leaders have waxed enthusiastic about the appointment of Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre as American High Commissioner in the Philippines. Mr. Sayre, it is said, is in sympathy with the policies of the United States to grant the Philippine independence compatible with equity and justice.

The native leaders are correct in their interpretation of Mr. Sayre's attitude toward the Philippines. Mr. Sayre had a hand recently in formulating a bill now pending in Congress designed to cushion the economic shock involved in the weaning of the Philippines from American sovereignty.

But there are two Francis B. Sayres. One is that person with the sympathetic attitude toward the Filipinos during the probational period of their independence. The other is the one who uttered the following words as chairman of the Interdepartmental Committee on Philippine affairs:

"It has been the historic policy of the United States for more than a century to carry on its trade and commerce with foreign countries on the most-favored-nation basis or, in other words, on the basis of equality and nondiscrimination. Every preference granted exclusively to one nation constitutes a discrimination against all others; and discrimination invites retaliation, counterdiscrimination and rising trade barriers. A preferential trade arrangement between nations is a form of trade barrier which, particularly in recent years, we have been striving earnestly to eliminate.

"To continue, indefinitely . . . a preferential arrangement with the Philippines after their independence would, therefore, be in direct conflict with our fundamental commercial policy of nondiscrimination and trade liberalization. The single exception to our historic policy is the case of Cuba. Such an exception should not be extended."

In other words, Mr. Sayre, being a disciple of the Hull trade-treaty program, does not look with favor upon the extension of trade benefits to the Philippines beyond independence in 1946. As a matter of fact, the pending Philippine bill in Congress does not contemplate granting such extension of free-trade benefits after Philippine independence. And Mr. Sayre was practically the author of that bill.

Tough On Car Riders

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The article "Doctors offer plan to curb crashes," contains worthwhile suggestions; but in the main treats the externals, the superficials, of today's traffic curse. They simply follow the lead of the traffic directors and "experts," whose solution for the new problem is simply to bear down harder on that unfortunate dog, the pedestrian.

I've always thought the doctors might do something on a national scale to prevent America's complete surrender to the ravages of the motor age, with its killing pace of life. What I'd like to see is a broad campaign to "save America"—or are they, too, helpless victims?

They might point out that kids in their late teens would be better off (minus permits) if they showed a little action. They might preach that feet are things to walk on; that the benefits of using a bicycle (as millions of Europeans know) far exceed the value of dawdling around in lizard-like ease and futility in fast cars, smoking endless cigarettes, promoting premature degeneration and dry-rot of the organs; that under such auspices a sound night's sleep surpasses the joys of an all-night frolic in some boozy night club with its atmosphere of loud-mouthed babble.

Poddun Me

"DADBURNED if I know, Yeronner," said Patrolman O'Brien. "When I got there they was all pushin' each other in the face."

"Pushing each other in the face, were they," echoed the judge. He seized his gavel by the end of the handle and glared at the two dozen faces which ringed his bench. His luncheon coffee had been even more like lye than usual.

"What ye think, Dennaman?" whispered the clerk.

The judge turned his bloodshot eyes on the clerk. What he saw did not make his stomach any more comfortable. Dinsey reminded him of fungus growing in a dark place. In fact, Dinsey had been around the station so long and so continuously that he smelled like prison stew. Dennaman wondered idly whether the clerk went home at night or slept in one of the cells. He had never seen the man without that threadbare, collarless tunic preserved from some previous administration. The bald head was the color of rotting wood, and from it hung a fringe of hair.

"I don't think anything, Mr. Dinsey," said the judge finally, "and I haven't asked you to think anything either.

"Well," he gritted at his two dozen prisoners, "What have you got to say?"

A young man in some sort of uniform stepped forward.

Judge Dennaman socked his gavel down. "Get back in line, you! If I want to hear from you I'll call on you."

"But, Judge——"

"Address me as 'Your Honor.'"

"All right, Your Honor. You see, I——"

"I thought I told you to keep quiet." He turned to the end of the line. "What do you know about this?" he asked the first person, an old man who kept his cupped hand behind his ear.

"But Your Honor," persisted the young man, "it ain't any use for you to question all these people."

The fellow's endurance took the judge by surprise. "Why?" he asked.

"Because I'm responsible for it."

"Oh. So you're responsible for it. Well, isn't that just fine, step forward, young man." A woman tittered in the back of the courtroom and Judge Dennaman used his gavel. "Well?"

"Well, it's this way, Judge, I mean Your Honor. Somebody gives me a call to the Health-a-Food Grocery Store."

Dennaman tapped the desk. "What has that got to do with this case, please?"

"I'm coming to that, Your Honor. Somebody gives me a call to the Health-a-Food Grocery Store."

"Seems to me we had that once already."

"All right, Your Honor. I'm just trying to keep things in the right order. Anyway, somebody—I mean, when I get there I park my cab outside and I go in and look around. There ain't nobody in there that looks like they want to pay for a ride. So I says, 'Did anybody call a cab?' But nobody answers, see?"

The gavel smacked. "Don't say 'see? to me. Remember you're in a courtroom."

"Yes, sir, Your Honor. So nobody answers, and nobody takes any notice of me, and I just stand and wait. And still nobody——"

"If you don't come to the point I'm going to have you locked up."

"And while I look, Your Honor, I notice nobody even has any expression on his face. There's a clerk runnin' up and down behind the counter, grabbin' things off the shelves, but he don't look at nobody above the necktie. 'Whasfoyou,' he says, 'whasfoyou.' But he don't even try to look like he cares what's for anybody. And this old guy on the end here is standin' lookin' at the canned goods, but he don't see nothing. And that girl there—the one with all the lipstick on—"

The gavel fell again.

"That young lady there, then, she's talkin' to the young feller with the apron on, and their words is kiddin', but neither one of 'em cracks a smile. So 'Did any you punks call cab?' I shouts, but nobody gets mad. They don't even look. I begin to get oppressed. You know, even a taxi driver can get oppressed."

"I'm getting oppressed myself," said Judge Dennaman. "What has all this got to do with——?"

"I'm comin' to that, Your Honor. Well, it's awful hot, and the fan's goin' but it don't seem to be movin' the air, and that kid there—that kid is sittin' back of the meat counter tappin' on a bottle half full of water, bing, bing, bing, just like that, one note same as the last one. And swelterin' as it is, that fat woman there, uh that lady, is feelin' the cakes. She doesn't have any reason, so far as I can see, but here she comes down the counter pickin' up a package in first one hand and then the other. When she comes to me she says 'Poddun me,' just like that without no meanin' in her voice, 'Poddun me,' and bumps me with her shoulder and goes on past, squeezin' all the cakes. So I push her in the face."

Judge Dennaman looked at the prisoner with some interest. "And then what happened?"

"I look to see what anybody's gonna do about it, and the first thing I know they're all pushin' each other in the face."

"What ye think, Dennaman?" whispered Dinsey. His mouth was like a frog's.

The judge looked thoughtful.

"I think," he said, "it might be a pretty good idea." Suddenly he pushed Dinsey in the face.

In a moment the courtroom, which had been a sea of faces, became a mass of piston-like right arms.

Fair Enough

Senatorial License

LAST SATURDAY, in the Senate, Joe Guffey, of Pennsylvania, arose to defend his character against matter published in the press with intent, so he said, to destroy the same. A newspaper article on the subject of the Mexican expropriation of oil properties owned by Americans and other foreigners, written by Marquis Childs, he described as 100 per cent false. Not only that that, but under his Senatorial license to defame with impunity he made a remark which amounts to a charge of very unethical, if not corrupt, conduct against Mr. Childs.

"I am sure," he said "that he received other compensation than that he receives from his regular employer to send that story out."

Mention was made also of another story, written by Ruth Sheldon, of Tulsa, Okla., and published in the current Saturday Evening Post, dealing with the same subject. Senator Guffey said he had no doubt that Miss Sheldon wrote her story for the same reason, which would be for hidden compensation.

Senatorial Immunity Protects Mr. Guffey

BOTH PIECES CHARGED, said Guffey, that he made a trip to Mexico City in 1937, before the expropriation, with Walter A. Jones, a Pittsburgh politician and oil operator, who contributed to the 1932 and 1936 Roosevelt campaign funds and that, later, Guffey and Jones conferred in Jones' apartment in Washington with the Mexican finance minister and W. R. Davis, an American promoter, who is said to be the Mexican government's agent handling the expropriated oil. Guffey also is an oil operator.

The implications concerning Guffey are not very distinct, but, nevertheless, the Senator felt that his character had received pretty rough treatment and defended himself against "unsupported charges," which are actionable if false, by uttering unsupported charges of his own under protection of his Senatorial immunity. His charges against Childs and Miss Sheldon, if false, are not actionable. He did not trouble to offer any evidence that either writer had been bribed or had received hidden inducements in any other guise to write as they did.

In the absence of any such evidence it may be assumed that Guffey has none.

Writers May Have Showdown Chance

GUFFEY WAS valiantly defended by Sherman Minton, of Indiana, the man who once offered a bill which might have made it a crime to print the Bible, but none of the several statesmen who were so alert to resent reflections on Guffey's character felt any obligation of decency, honor or courtesy to resent with equal vigor their colleague's reflections on the character of the two journalists.

Senator Bridges, the New Hampshire needle, who is always jabbing such selfless altruists as Senator Guffey, announced that he intended to demand a Senatorial investigation of the whole business of the Mexican oil expropriation, so there may be some hope of a showdown in which the two writers will have a chance to prove against Guffey whatever it was that they meant to suggest in their stories and to disprove his accusations against them. But unless some inquiry is held this will be just another case in which a statesman answers reflections on his own character by cowardly attacks on the character and reputation of the accuser.

Pretty Miss Sheldon Would Attract Crowd

INCIDENTALLY, if Miss Sheldon should be given a chance to appear in person at such an inquiry, there would be a stampede of shaggy old bucks and dapper young ones to sling questions at her, including "what is your telephone number?" because she is a cutey who would knock your eye out.

Where were we?

Well, I don't think Senator Guffey will press a demand for an inquiry by which he could disprove whatever it is of an aspersive nature that he perceived in these reports and, on the other hand, prove the accusation which he has made against these writers. Because, if they ever get to comparing characters—that is to say, Guffey's on one side and Childs' and Miss Sheldon's on the other—they are not likely to bring out anything in the lives and adventures of the two writers which would be worth mentioning in the same piece with Guffey's experience with the $408,000 that he received as interest on public funds when he was in the alien property job and which he eventually kicked back and his anguish with the income tax department back in Harding's time.

The Senate has some curious superstitions about the sanctity of the characters of its members. But no other person's character has a ghost of a chance if a Senator decides to resort to slander in lieu of disproval and vindication.

Senate Bill Puts Chopowamsic In Park System

The Senate passed and sent to the House yesterday a bill to provide for the future operation of the Chopowamsic recreational demonstration project, near Dumfries, Va., as a part of the National Capital park system. Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, introduced the bill.

The National Park Service requested the legislation, explaining that although it was the plan to turn most of these recreational areas back to the States, it was desired to retain this particular area because of its value to Washington social agencies.

The Chopawamsic area is similar to that in the Catoctin Mountains, near Thurmont, Md., and has been in operation about two years. A large number of charitable and social agencies have made use of it.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

MARDI GRAS, in New Orleans, brings a climax to "Days Before Lent" (Scribner's, $2.50), a fact which explains the title of Hamilton Basso's absorbing and richly contained new novel. It is a brilliant novel, of complex and colorful background, of fascinating play of incident, of virtuosity and poetic skill. But its finest quality lies in the sense of life which, doubly effective, gives convincingness to its story and sure value to its theme. This is a novel about the pursuit of wisdom.

It is also a novel which brings both novelty and courage to an old human theme. A man's harsh choice between love and work poses a question as old as civilization, and maybe older. Shall the young scientist, here, take a dull commercial job and make enough money to marry, or shall he give up his happiness and devote himself to his important research? The New Orleans novelist attacks and solves that problem in the person of a protagonist who is a rounded and individualized human being. And as he creates human beings in his novel, so Hamilton Basso is able without strain or sentimentality to make of the novel his own echoing chant du monde. Jason Kent, we learn early in the story, has spent much of his childhood in a "pretty violent neighborhood" in New Orleans. In some books the people of such neighborhoods have been seen as "rather foul and degraded;" in Jason's recollection there were smells and bad happenings and "some of the people didn't mince words," but as for foulness and degradation, they "simply were not there." At the book's end, when the days before Lent are over and the colors of carnival droop faded and dirty on the lampposts, the scientist can find wisdom in the union of knowledge with tolerance.

JASON KENT was the son of an eccentric physician who had loved humanity and whose worldly failure could hold its own triumph in human understanding and assistance and in pride as well. As a young public-health doctor, Jason had worked with the plague-stricken flotsam of the Louisiana bayous and made some remarkable discoveries about the plague's nature and possible treatment. In the "days before Lent" the opportunity came to continue his studies. But Susanna had only just come into his life, and he wanted to keep her there forever. He could not marry Susanna and do plague research in India. He must solve his problem at once; but in the week that ended with the end of carnival, other people willy-nilly pressed their own problems upon his mind.

Poor old Joe, once a gay-spirited young pugilist who had been like a brother to him, now gin-soaked, "muggled," obsessed and dazed . . . Splendid, altruistic Victor, his lifelong friend, a priest who had worked out a plan to save and revitalize the poor unemployed wretches of the waterfront but could not start on his task without his archbishop's consent . . . Danny the newspaperman, too dissipated to stick to his work, but as smart and ruthless as his politician father in landing on his feet after every disaster . . . The successful playwright Tyrrell Surtees, sunk in self-pity, clinging to the visualization of his own despair . . . The South American exile, Dr. Gomez, who loved liberty with all his heart but was sometimes a little discouraged: he sometimes thought of liberty, he said, as "a woman of whom men have grown tired" . . . There were all these and more, with Susanna as a constant aching consciousness at the back of Jason's thought. Out of all that he sees and hears and feels, in those days, Jason's own decision at last is made.

This is an extraordinarily fine novel, written with beauty, candor and shrewdness and out of an understanding compassion.

ERIC LINKLATER'S new novel, "Judas" (Farrar & Rinehart $2), is a startling human parable. The Scottish novelist has told a direct story which contains his interpretation of a historic character and a historic event: the foundation of the Christian religion. But we may ponder over the human characteristics which he emphasizes, down into our own day.

For this book is a compassionate study of the temperament and tragedy of Judas Iscariot, who "betrayed his dearest friend because he loved him and feared him." The betrayer need not be a conscious traitor or scoundrel, even though he betray the hopes of all mankind. He may be merely a timid soul who loves peace and security, dreads the very mention of any upheaval, is gifted with the dread power of believing what he subconsciously wants to believe, and goes bemused by fear. And Judas, betraying the Saviour, saw himself as the savior of the peace of the world.

He was a sensitive young man of the comfortable possessing classes, who had been timid all his young life, and who saw in Jesus not merely a personal inspiration of loving kindness and clear intelligence, but the sure promise of the reign of peace and stability on earth. He loved, followed, reverenced the new teacher because he believed that through His power and goodness the world might be made what Judas earnestly wanted it to be: "a clean and happy place: a place without fear." And Judas himself was incapable of realizing that his sincere pacifism was based upon his simple wish to "own his property in perfect safety," and that it was part and parcel not only of his inborn hatred of the rude and grasping mob, but also of his own grasping love of his possessions, his neurotic parsimony: his whole soul cried out for security for his own privilege.

That was what he really meant when he exclaimed, later, "We want peace and happiness and that's all that's worth bothering about." That was how he felt an easy victim to the shrewd persuasions of the Sadducees when he learned that the teachings of Jesus went farther than Judas had dreamed, that they might stir up violence, might be something to fight for. And in his natural necessity for self-justification and self-praise the next step, too, was almost inevitable: "I took everything upon my own shoulders," he said, proudly. In every street of the city you'll hear my name and gratitude for the bread they eat in peace because I gave them peace."

Murphy's Record

By Ernest K. Lindley

Out-Deweying Dewey

A FEW MONTHS AGO Attorney General Frank Murphy's friends in Washington were pleased when he was spoken of as "The New Deal's Tom Dewey." But after adding up Murphy's achievements in six and one-half months, some of them think that the young New York prosecutor—with full credit for his energy and resourcefulness—should feel flattered to be known as "The Republican Party's Frank Murphy."

Both were born in Michigan and have a reputation for fearless prosecution of corruption. Murphy, of course, has had an immensely broader experience in public life than Dewey, who is nine years his junior. As a prosecutor, Murphy made his reputation 19 years ago when, as a Chief Assistant United States Attorney, he put in jail for war-time frauds several wealthy men who were defended by a dozen of the ablest lawyers in Michigan.

Dewey A Tyro Against Murphy

SINCE THEN Murphy has accumulated an almost unrivaled experience in public life—as head of the Detroit criminal court system, as Mayor of Detroit, as Governor-General and High Commissioner to the Philippines, as Governor of Michigan, and now as Attorney General. Dewey has political sex appeal, and he may have all the administrative ability and talent for leadership in public affairs that his friends think he has. But on the record he is just a tyro in comparison with Murphy.

Murphy has earned and received a fair share of publicity during the seven months since he became Attorney General. He has brought about the convictions of the ranking judge of the Federal Circuit Courts of Appeal, and of the boss of one of the most powerful and celebrated Democratic political machines. He is slashing his way through the unmatched political corruption of Louisiana. He has brought about the indictment of the Republican boss of Atlantic City, and his men are probing the affairs of other important politicians of both parties.

During Murphy's first six months as Attorney Geenral convictions were obtained in more than 97 per cent of the 16,563 criminal cases of all kinds in the Federal courts which were disposed of by final judgment following trial or pleas of guilty.

Staff Overhauling Now Completed

MURPHY'S WORK as a supervising prosecutor, spurring the United States attorneys and thrusting aside the political fixers, has been matched by his work as an all-around constructive administrator. There is as much significance in the kinds of men he is bringing into the Federal Government (or advancing to the front line of activity) as in the kinds of men he is driving out of public life.

The overhauling of the general staff of the Department of Justice, which Murphy began several months ago, has now been completed. He can now hold a staff meeting with the knowledge that every man present is either a personal appointee or a New Dealer in whom he has full confidence.

In the key position as the assistant to the Attorney General is Murphy's trusted friend Edward G. Kemp, a 52-year-old bachelor who graduated with honors from the University of Michigan Law School. Kemp was legal adviser to Murphy in the Philippines and Lansing. He is a retiring, cool-headed (Murphy calls him "cold-blooded") man who tells the truth as he sees it, even when it hurts.

Aides Stand High In Legal Fraternity

THEN THERE ARE the four new Assistant Attorney Generals chosen by Murphy. In charge of the tax division is Samuel O. Clark, jr., 40-year-old brother of Charles E. Clark, former dean of the Yale Law School, now a circuit court of appeals judge. Samuel O. Clark, jr., graduated from Yale and from the Yale Law School magna cum laude, standing at the top of his class. He practiced law in New York and Connecticut until 1934, when he was brought onto the staff of the SEC, where Murphy got him.

In charge of the criminal division is 35-year-old O. John Rogge, a graduate with honors of the University of Illinois and Harvard Law School. Since 1934 Rogge has worked for the RFC, the Treasury and has been assistant general counsel in charge of litigation for the SEC.

At the head of the lands division is 39-year-old Norman Littell, a Hoosier who won a Rhodes scholarship and later studied law at Harvard and the University of Washington. He practiced law in Seattle and performed most creditably some special jobs for the petroleum administrator and the Department of Justice.

Impressive Staff Brims With Ability

IN CHARGE of claims is Francis M. Shea, 34-year-old dean of the University of Buffalo Law School. A brilliant graduate of Dartmouth and Harvard Law School, Shea has had a varied experience in private practice and Government work.

The other two top-ranking men in the Justice Department are holdovers of indisputable ability: Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson and Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the anti-trust division.

Murphy thinks his general staff is the best in the history of the Department of Justice. Certainly it is brimming over with talent and energy, and it is impervious to political influence. It is as impressive, in its way, as the series of circuit court appointments made on Murphy's advice, and is another potent reminder of the high order of ability which an alert and determined administrator can muster for the service of progressive government.

War In Mongolia

By Mark J. Ginsbourg

Special Correspondence of The Post.

More Undeclared Hostilities

Shanghai.

BEHIND a screen of censorship, propaganda and belligerent threats, Japan and Russia are today fighting a major war in the grassy plains across which the Manchurian-Outer Mongolian Border uncertainly wends its way.

That Tokyo no longer regards the conflict as ordinary frontier affrays, so common along the 3,000-mile boundary between Russia and the Japanese-controlled territory, was admitted in the Japan Times and Mail, the mouthpiece of the Foreign Office, late in June. Said the journal:

". . . It is now made definite that the Soviets and Outer Mongolia on one side and 'Manchukuo' and Japan on the other are at war. This state of affairs is indisputable despite all efforts to belittle the significance of the military incidents in this border zone or despite any camouflage to make them appear small border skirmishes with little political significance."

This frank statement, amplified by threats to "take a more active attitude on that and possibly other fronts," has been echoed by spokesmen in the forbidding red-brick Kwantung Army headquarters in Changchun.

That Moscow, after a month of complete silence, is also regarding the new border clashes with the attention they deserve was indicated by the virtual severance of relations with Japan. The Russian charge d'affairs in Tokyo, Constantin Smetanin, left Tokyo on July 5, leaving behind a handful of minor officials unauthorized to deal with major political issues. Significantly, the embassy's brass door-plates have been removed, as if to emphasize the seriousness of the break.

SMETANIN'S recall followed by four weeks the warning to Japan by Vyacheslav Molotov, the new Soviet Foreign Commissar and Joseph Stalin's Man Friday, that Moscow would not tolerate any violation of Outer Mongolian borders and that Russia's patience was "at a limit."

These belligerent declarations, both in Tokyo and Moscow, have been reflected in border fighting on an almost unprecedented scale. Last year's famous battle of the Changkufeng Hill involved more troops—50,000 on both sides—but the number of aircraft and mechanized units participating in this year's "skirmishes" has already by far exceeded last year's figures.

The Japanese claim having shot down around 350 planes in the first seven weeks of the new "little war." Included among these craft were the 98 machines allegedly destroyed on the morning of June 27, when the air—according to a Japanese official report—was so thick with Soviet airplanes that they crashed into each other. Twenty Russian tanks were said to have been destroyed by Japanese anti-tank guns and mines in a single engagement earlier this month, while more than 160 Russian motorized units are claimed to have been destroyed thus far.

THE SOVIET claims—more moderate and therefore more plausible—were that 39 Japanese machines were shot down in border engagements up to June 26. Russian losses were put at 23 planes. The Japanese infantry units were said to have lost 400 men killed in battles between May 11 and June 1, as contrasted with 40 men killed and 70 wounded in the Russo-Mongolia force. As the most severe engagements were fought late in June and early in July, the casualties on both sides may have run into many thousands.

A major offensive against the Outer Mongolian positions east of and along the 60-meter-wide Khalkha River was launched by the Japanese on July 2, and despite bitter fighting and enthusiastic claims by the Kwantung army almost no progress was recorded a week later.

A British newspaperman, who was allowed to witness the fighting because of his propaganda activities on behalf of the Japanese, ruefully admitted on July 8 that

". . . the crest of the (Nomonhan) hill remains no-man's-land, but the Mongols grimly are hanging on to the western ridges despite grueling artillery and machine gun fire. Crossing the Khalkha River under a heavy Japanese artillery barrage, driblets of Mongolian forces now are rushing to reinforce their comrades holding out below Nomonhan . . . My impression is that the planned exploitation of the earlier Japanese successes has not come up to expectation owing to Mongol counter-attacks with force . . . Two outstanding features of the fighting are the accuracy of the Soviet artillery and the deadly bombing of Japanese planes . . ."

In another report a day earlier, the newsman again praised the uncanny accuracy of Soviet artillery fire and hinted (possibly with an eye on the Japanese censors) that the Japanese offensive has been spent in the face of determined Mongol counterattacks and large scale shifting of troops by night.

WITH THESE claims and counter-claims it is naturally difficult to form an unprejudiced opinion of the latest border imbroglio. Neutral military observers here believe that the Japanese had sprung a painful surprise on the Soviets by concentrating in Hailar and other Manchurian bases, under a cover of secrecy, a force of the latest pursuit planes manned by crack army fliers, possibly brought from North China. Reports released in Tokyo and Changchun also indicated that some of the highest officers in the army air force are actively engaged in fighting.

Other reports received here indicated that the bulk of the Soviet planes participating in the engagements were the SB light bombers, designed four or five years ago, the relatively obsolete E-14 and E-15 pursuits, and the fast but unmaneuverable E-16 and JKB chasers. These craft, especially if they were manned by untried Mongol pilots, would be of little use against the pick of the Japanese air force, who have had two years of actual war experience.

The strength of the Japanese force in the area is further indicated by the fact that it is commanded by a lieutenant-general (Komatsubara). This would make the force, cryptically described by the Japanese as the "Komatsubara unit," include at least a war-time division (20,000 men), fully equipped with artillery and motorized units. This force favorably compares with the Outer Mongolian army, whose total strength has been estimated by the Japanese themselves at 27,000 men.

THE RELATIVE strength of the two combatants might, however, change almost overnight. Fresh motorized units and infantry have been reported moving to Hailar from Changchun and Mukden, two major Japanese bases. The Soviets were reported to be slowly moving 60,000 infantrymen toward the front from bases in central Siberia. There have also been indications that the Japanese have already begun to utilize the services of Mongols brought from the newly-established puppet state in Inner Mongolia and of White Russians.

The present scene of fighting lies about 160 miles southwest of Hailar, the strongest Japanese base in western Manchuria. This sprawling, dusty Chinese town is now garrisoned by a force of two divisions (one of which has been moved to the border) and is heavily fortified. From its air fields, Japanese pursuit planes can reach the Lake Buir area within half an hour. Trucks traveling along well-built military highways can bring troops and supplies to the scene within eight hours.

In addition, the Japanese have constructed a number of emergency air fields in the immediate vicinity of Lake Buir, while Japanese-Manchurian units are known to be garrisoned in the little Mongol hamlets and monasteries dotting the grassy frontier plains.

THE SOVIETS, on the other hand, are in a less advantageous position. Their nearest air base is at Tamsk, a little Mongol town about 60 miles from the border. This town, as well as a smaller air base in the neighborhood, has already apparently been destroyed by Japanese air raiders, who seemingly took advantage of the absence of the Soviet air force, which at the moment was bombing Japanese troops elsewhere along the border.

The nearest Mongol base even remotely comparable to Hailar is at Ulan Bator, the capital of the Soviet Mongolian Republic, which lies approximately 500 miles west of Tamsk. The two points are linked by a highway, but the trucks moving toward the front would obviously be machine-gunned by Japanese raiders. It is useful in this connection to recall the Japan Times' ominous reference to the Kwantung army's readiness to strike at "danger points" in "any direction and almost at any distance."

Verkhneudinsk, the Soviet gateway to Outer Mongolia, is not linked directly with the Manchurian Border. Thus, supplies and infantry reinforcements would have to be carried about 250 miles over a highway to Ulan Bator and then re-routed east, towards the Lake Buir battlegrounds.

All this would tend to indicate that while it would be to the advantage of the Japanese to localize the fighting to this area, where they enjoy positional and numerical superiority, it is distinctly to Russia's advantage to create a diversion elsewhere along the Soviet-Korean border. Such an eventuality might convert the present hostilities into a major Russo-Japanese war, with the consequent serious international repercussions.

The Kwantung army has been preparing for a "holy war" on Russia for the last five years. Even today, billions of yen are being poured into the border areas for the construction of fortifications, air fields, railways and air raid shelters. With the Japanese war machine bogged in China's vastness, the Kwantung army may decide to pick this as the suitable moment for going into action on its own. If it does, Japan will find herself engaged in a life-and-death struggle with two major foes along a front extending half-across Asia.

President Decries Lending Defeat

the lending program. He said the Government would be putting money out on good security under the program.

He recalled criticisms of proposed loans by Jesse H. Jones' RFC in 1934, and the declaration of his own former budget director, Lewis Douglas, that Jones wouldn't get half of it back. He said Douglas came to him so often with such a long face he concluded he was out of sympathy with the program and let him get out. Critics, he said, seem to have forgotten that Jones did get it back.

As for the housing program, which reporters advised him also seemed due for defeat, the President said that action also would mean a great many people will lose the chance of getting jobs. The bill's objective, he said, was to begin slum clearance in smaller cities. He said there are plenty of applications to take care of all existing jobs.

Minority Chief Surprised

The House action in denying a green light to the lending bill came after only one hour of heated debate. Previously the Senate had emasculated its version of the bill, slicing the $2,800,000,000 to $1,615,000,000, eliminating railroad equipment and highway funds entirely, pruning foreign loan funds and binding the measure with tight restrictions. Not the Senate bill, but the House Banking Committee's own measure, slashed from $2,800,000,000 to $1,980,000,000, was the subject of the House rule defeated yesterday.

"This is the end of spending-lending and the end of U. S. housing, too," commented Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, House Rules Committee member who had canvassed Democrats against the rule. "The House killed two birds with one stone."

House Minority Leader Martin, who had underestimated House opposition strength and was obviously surprised at the result, said it meant "Congress is tired of wasting the people's money and wants to get back to a sane spending program."

Advised of the President's comment, Senator Austin, of Vermont, acting Senate minority leader, said "those who voted against the rule should be glad to take the credit for what they have done. It will do more to stimulate business than anything that has happened in many a year."

Federal Works Administrator John M. Carmody, who would have directed a large share of the program, grinned ruefully as he left the White House. "Now I haven't anything to do," smiled Carmody, "I can take a vacation."

Speaker Bankhead, as he left a conference with Majority Leader Rayburn, commented only: "When my gavel falls sine die it will all be over."

Rayburn, who had pleaded earnestly with his colleagues to approve the rule, added: "It won't be long now." Adjournment should come at least by Saturday "and it may come within 48 hours," said the majority leader.

Rayburn Makes Futile Plea

A few minutes earlier, the bald, stocky Texan stood in the well of the House making his last, futile effort to save the bill. When the President recommended a measure, he said, it is "asking little" of the House to consider it. A lending bill passed in a reasonable form and administered in a reasonable way, he said, would aid recovery "from farm to country—from the farm worker to the city toiler."

"We are going to have Government ownership of the railroads unless something is done to make them a little more prosperous and to make it a little easier for them to operate," he warned.

Representative Robertson (Democrat), of Virginia, led the Democratic opposition forum in the brisk hour of debate that doomed the bill. Angry because Democratic Rules Committee managers had denied him speaking time, Robertson obtained time from the Republican allotment, and urged: "Let's defeat this bill and end this argument right now."

"You can try some experiments and repeal them, but you can't repeal the public debt," shouted Robertson. "This bill will not restore business confidence. It is setting up a Government pump to compete with private enterprise."

At the outset of debate, Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, raised a point of order against the rule, which was promptly overruled by Speaker Bankhead. The pending rule permitted no points against the bill itself. Chairman Sabath, of the Rules Committee, took the floor to urge its adoption.

Debt Subterfuge Charged

Representatives Mapes and Wolcott, of Michigan, then led a Republican frontal attack against the bill. Wolcott charged the bill set up a device for raising money outside the $45,000,000,000 debt limit and said that "if money can be raised in this unorthodox fashion there isn't any reason it won't be raised in the same way to pay administrative expenses."

As Representative Robertson, from Senator Byrd's Virginia district, launched his furious assault on the bill, another Virginia Democrat, Representative Woodrum, remarked that the loan plan marked "a revolutionary departure" from present appropriations procedure.

When the clerk called the roll on the rule, the "noes" took the lead from the start and held it through the long, close vote. Applause greeted the Speaker's crisp announcement of defeat, and for ten minutes Bankhead gavelled vainly for order. Swiftly the news spread to the Senate and an echoing hubbub interrupted routine debate.

"The Senate is all through now," Majority Leader Barkley told reporters as he left for a conference with House leaders. "All we have left to pass is the third deficiency bill. We should adjourn before Saturday."

But several troublesome matters remained. Chairman Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, said hope for enactment of the Social Security amendments this session is dim. House conferees have refused to accept the Senate's Connally amendment requiring a two-thirds Federal contribution toward the first $15 of State old age assistance grants. A plan to compromise on a minimum $7.50 Federal payment met with no better success.

A decision to consider either the apparently doomed housing bill or the pending wage-hour amendments likewise may delay a leave-taking. A last serious obstacle remains in the third deficiency bill. Relief bloc attempts to attach three controversial riders in the Senate to restore the WPA prevailing (union) wage, revive Federal theater projects and repeal the 18-month relief roll rotation rule, may jeopardize the measure.

Imaginary Interviews: Farley And Hamilton

(Leaving the Liner Manhattan.)

Jim—Well, it wasn't such a bad crossing, after all.

John—No, indeed; we could have had worse. It seemed funny to find myself in a stateroom a few doors from you.

Jim—I never feel at ease so close to a Republican, either.

John—Did my snoring disturb you?

Jim—No; I got used to it in the 1936 campaign.

John—Did I snore during that campaign?

Jim—You and Alf did nothing else.

John—I see by the papers that you and the President are still the closest of pals.

Jim—There has never been the slightest coolness between us. He's for me and I'm for him. We see eye to eye on all issues.

John—Where did you get that idea?

Jim—I also read the same papers you did.

John—I don't suppose you would give me your honest opinion regarding Roosevelt running for a third term?

Jim—I wish I knew.

Jim—You wish YOU knew.

John—In my opinion, he wants a third term and will run for it. This will split the party and give the Republican Party a victory.

John—What fellow?

Jim—The Republican Party.

John—That was a good gag in 1932 and 1936, but it won't mean a thing in 1940. The public is tired of Roosevelt and will turn him out.

Jim—For whom?

Jim—If the Republicans knew of a good candidate they would have sprung him long ago.

John—History shows there has almost always been prosperity under the Republicans. The Democrats only get in when a depression begins.

John—What are they?

Jim—You and I wouldn't know.

John—Well, it's nice to have crossed with you. Are you staying in Europe long?

Jim—No; I won't have time.

John—You'll have plenty after the next election. If you're over here again after 1940 send me a post card.

Jim—Where will you be?

John—At the White House.

Jim—That's what YOU think! Are you staying abroad long?

John—No; I've got to hurry back.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Playwrights' Company Passes Its First Birthday

Dramatist-Producers Plan Busy New Season; 'Going Native' Scheduled for August 18; This, That and the Other About the Theater

JUST A YEAR AGO everyone in show business and a great many people outside were wondering if the idea would work. They were skeptical about the practicability of five distinguished men of the theater, known theretofore exclusively as dramatic authors, banding together to become joint producers of their own plays. That doubt now has become pretty well dissipated.

BELL

The Playwrights' Company, composed of Maxwell Anderson, S. N. Behrman, Sidney Howard, Elmer Rice and Robert E. Sherwood, yesterday rounded out its first full year of operation with three hits to its credit out of four times at bat. That is a handsome average in any league and rather effectually disproves the belief that successful play production is a monopoly that rests solely in the hands of those who have engaged in that hazardous occupation over a span of years.

The three hits, of course, were Robert E. Sherwood's "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," Maxwell Anderson and Kurt Weill's "Knickerbocker Holiday"—both of which were seen here at the National before they went on to Broadway—and S. N. Behrman's "No Time for Comedy," currently starring Katharine Cornell, which Washington hasn't seen at all. The single failure was Elmer Rice's "American Landscape," but, even so, it was so earnest a drama as to gain a place on many informal lists of the year's best plays.

That the Playwrights' Company has been successful financially as well as artistically, needless to say, is a source of gratification to its members, but they are too experienced and hard-headed not to know that the theater is a huge gamble and that the profits of this year can be quickly wiped out in another. That, however, is not deterring them.

As this is written, the Playwrights approach the coming season with three completed manuscripts and various others in course of preparation. The first of the company's new offerings, scheduled for October, will be Sidney Howard's "Madam Will You Walk," for which a cast now is being chosen. Mr. Howard will stage his own work and Robert Edmond Jones will fashion its several settings. Following the Howard play will come Maxwell Anderson's "Key Largo," with Paul Muni as its star. Mr. Anderson will be represented later on in the season by a second musical comedy, written in collaboration with Kurt Weill. There also will be new plays by Elmer Rice, S. N. Behrman and Robert E. Sherwood.

Since all of these gentlemen look upon Washington as practically an ideal "try-out" city, it is not impossible that the National Theater may house at least as many of the new works prior to New York as it did last year—maybe more. Hope springs eternal, etc.

Manager Edmund Plohn, of the National, incidentally, has no definite word as to when his new season will open or with what. That is to say, he had no definite information up to 36 hours ago, when I encountered him out on E street "walking the dog." There are, to be sure, numerous bookings tentatively penciled in for the National, but many of them are new productions and the whole setup is still so nebulous that our good friend Leonard Bergman, executive administrator of the Erlanger estate, controlling the National Theater, and his Broadway associates refuse to commit themselves this far in advance. It is highly probable, nevertheless, that the Playwrights' Company will be represented among those new plays Mr. Bergman is talking about.

If you are one who had planned a trip to the Spanish Garden Ballroom, out at Glen Echo Park, to hear Allen De Witt sing with "Tiny" Hill's excellent orchestra, you are too late, Mr. De Witt, in a perfectly amicable way, has detached himself from the Hill organization and will not be heard warbling his roundelays with the band from this point out. The assumption is that his place will be promptly filled by another vocalist of equal attainment.

And speaking of bands, "Fats" Waller and His Orchestra will be the high-powered unit supplying the music for dancing and the entertainment for listening aboard the S. S. Potomac on two cruises this Saturday night at the usual hours. The ample and ebullient Waller is up against a peculiar problem. The last time he played on the S. S. Potomac he attracted so large a passenger list that many had to be left behind, waving on the dock. The only way he can beat that record is to leave more people behind. After all, the S. S. Potomac will hold just so many.

Tonight's performance of "Cato" at Glen Echo Playhouse will be attended by Dr. N. Bryllion Fagin, head of the dramatic department at Johns Hopkins University. It was Dr. Fagin who made the modern dress adaptation of the Addison work which the Glen Echo Players will enact tonight through next Tuesday, except Saturday and Sunday.

Dots and Dashes

Some of these current pictures must not be so bad . . . According to every present outlook, Ginger Rogers and David Niven in "Bachelor Mother," at RKO-Keith's; Mickey Rooney and the "Hardy Family" in "Andy Hardy Gets Spring Fever," at Loew's Palace, and "Alexander Nevsky," at the Little, will be held over for second weeks . . . And at the Capitol, the combination of "Irene," on the stage, and "Second Fiddle," with Power, Henie and Vallee, on the screen, is turning in a whale of a week for this time of year . . . That seventh annual edition of the "Going Native" revue has been scheduled for the Capitol stage the week of Friday, August 18 . . . If you think you see a whirling Dervish between now and then, that will be Producer Gene Ford . . . Since he has scored so enormously as a comedian with Jack Benny on both radio and screen, you may not associate Eddie "Rochester" Anderson with anything serious . . . Just the same, it was he who played Ol' Man Noah to Rex Ingram's De Lawd in the film version of "The Green Pastures" . . . Did a nice job of it, too . . . Speaking of Noah, Washington may not be such a bad summer resort after all . . . Dan Terrell, of the Warner organization, just back from his vacation, drops a note on the desk, saying in part: "Hope you don't have as much rain at Hains Point as we had at Bethany Beach" . . . Not a chance . . . If this diluvial reporting keeps up, there won't be rain enough to go 'round.

The New Yorker

Leon Janney, who was a juvenile star in the silent films, is anxious to return to Broadway, and has told his agent he'll work for any producer except Martin Jones . . . When Jones had employed Janney at the Vanderbilt Theater, they fought bitterly . . . One day the producer took Leon outside the theater, and showed him a new electric sign—with Janney's name in lights . . . "I just put it up," Jones explained, "to give you an idea what I'd do if I wanted to be nice to you. But now, take it down," Jones ordered his electrician.

Gregory Ratoff's new film contract calls for him to write as well as act and direct. He reminded Frank Lloyd about this, and so Lloyd gave him one line to rewrite: "I paid 50 sous for this." Ratoff rewrote it: "I paid 45 sous for this." . . Ben Hecht, pleased at Helen Hayes' performance in his new show, complimented the diminutive star by telling her: "You're every quarter-of-an-inch a genius" . . . Myron Selznick, the agent, became dissatisfied with the actions of one of his famous star-clients, and told him: "What do you suppose I'm paying you 90 per cent for?" . . . Mrs. Heywood Broun, who accompanied her husband to Hollywood, told an assemblage of producers: "My Heywood can be anything he wants to be—except flyweight champion.

An esthetic magazine wrote to Ernest Hemingway, and invited him to aid the cause by contributing an article, gratis. "I write for a living," Hemingway told them . . . "I am not an artist." Alabama's Governor has promised to relieve the plight of the Scottsboro boys now in jail—after the Legislative session.

One of the prominent men in New York night-life persists in making all his appointments in a rather unusual manner. He tells his friends, for example, "I'll meet you for lunch, at 12:16." He adheres to that custom: "I'll call for you at 8:26, or "I'll meet you at the Waldorf at 11:04" . . . He's punctual, too, but this is no mere idiosyncrasy—for he's the head of a prominent watch company.

Gracie Allen is bringing a Ubangi to Hollywood. "Ubangis are great," she enthused, "for near-sighted lip-readers" . . . The Yacopi Troupe of acrobats, working at a New York City theater, filled out the manager's questionnaire relating to previous accidents. A nerve specialist who once had treated Ben Bernie in Bad Nauheim, wrote to Ben, stated that he was anxious to come to America, and would Mr. Bernie please advance him $5,000. Dr. S. I. Hsiung, the Chinese playwright who wrote "Lady Precious Stream," had a two-hour conversation with George Bernard Shaw, and came away announcing: "He is the type of man who gets up each morning, and says: 'Hurrah! God—it's good to be George Bernard Shaw'" . . . Madelaine Carroll now has a maid who was employed by the Duchess of Norfolk. "The Duchess is all right," the maid assured her new mistress, "but she has one peculiar habit—she likes to put Gorgonzola cheese under her guests' pillows" . . . Hollywood, It Seems, Is One CockeyedTown

Reporter Sets Down Highlights of Two Years' Observation

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Aug. 1.—Two years ago today we docked in Hollywood and a lot of cockeyed things have happened in the movie business since. Here are a few that stick in our head for the fiscal year 1938-39:

Constance Bennett went to court rather than pay Artist Willy Pogany $5,000 for a portrait he painted; she said he made her thighs look too fat . . . Paramount erected an orange grove inside a sound stage, with every orange labeled "sunkist."

Sally Rand revealed that she wears a girdle . . . Metro spent $60,000 filming "The Wizard of Oz" before somebody discovered the Tin Woodsman was supposed to be rusty; he got a coat of rust and the scenes were reshot . . . There was a big to-do when a fan magazine printed an article entitled, "Hollywood's Unmarried Husbands and Wives." Two months later every person mentioned in that publication was married.

Luise Rainier, who won more Academy awards than any other actress, disappeared from the Hollywood scene . . . Ann Sheridan arrived.

Attack on Hitler Pays

The Warner Brothers started a campaign against Adolph Hitler and made money from it . . . Tony Cornero opened a gambling boat off the shore at Santa Monica and thumbed his nose at the police.

Jackie Coogan sued his mother and stepfather for an accounting of his $4,000,000 estate, only to discover that he didn't have a $4,000,000 estate; Betty Grable announced she was suing him for divorce.

The movie press agents formed a union . . . We saw a celebrated movie cowboy ride a mechanical horse . . . He made us promise we wouldn't print his name . . . Dolores Del Rio announced that she enjoyed gardenia blossoms for breakfast.

The Justice Department started income-tax proceedings against several still unnamed movie chieftains . . . Al Capone, who had a little tax trouble himself, was moved to Terminal Island Prison, just out of sight of the picture factories . . .

Disney Seeks to Repeat

His "Snow White" having earned more money than any other movie in history, Walt Disney put another full-length cartoon into production . . . Deanna Durbin got a boy friend.

The critics decided that the new version of "Beau Geste" wasn't as exciting as the first . . . "Gone With the Wind" was completed . . . the extras' union kicked because its dead soldiers were played by dummies instead of $7.50-per-day actors . . . Fox installed a picture swimming pool and filled it with engine oil, which makes better reflections than water.

The lady who was bitten by the Paramount ape now can sit down, but her $50,000 suit still is in court . . . the studio stylists predicted that American women would be wearing bustles by the first snowfall.

Metro's bachelor hairdresser, Sydney Guilaroff, adopted a baby boy . . . A well known radio entertainer told us in confidence that the breakfast food he advertised irritated the top of his mouth.

The Juveniles Mature

Gene Autry bought a skyblue cowboy suit and sailed for Europe with his horse . . . Bobby Breen changed his name to Bob . . . Shirley Temple grew another two inches . . . Jane Withers worried about her hips.

The man who makes $4,000 speedsters for the stars reported that business was booming . . . But Clark Gable sold his super-de luxe jallopie because autograph hounds climbed aboard at every stop light . . . The main street saloons installed strip tease artistes as entertainers.

Republic's serial writers went on strike until a horse, which was performing in a cowboy opera, was removed from their office and their typewriters were replaced.

May Robson established a realty company, renting houses only to people with children . . . Charlie Chaplin announced, as he announced last year and the year before, that his latest picture was about to go into production.

And if we get as many laughs next year as last we're sort of figuring on paying for the privilege of being your Hollywood correspondent.

'Twelfth Night' at the Sylvan

William Shakespeare's sunny, romantic comedy, "Twelfth Night," was performed last night before a full moon and an appreciative audience of 3,500 at the Sylvan Theater.

It was a brief tabloid version by Thomas Wood Stevens and the cast included some of the city's leading players. The hour and a half of playing time was unbroken by any intermission, an excellent method of maintaining the mood and flavor of this ever-delightful comedy.

A careful accent upon the poetry of the play was the performance's most stimulating quality. In the hands of an excellent actress, Yerby Pannill, Viola's lines had the clarity of enunciation and sincerity of expression which one associates with the better Shakespearian performers. Thomas M. Cahill's rolling diction likewise captured the unbroken attention of his audience. His Antonio was a friend of warmth and dignity to the stunned Sebastian. Another excellent and understanding portrayal was that of John Van Sikken as the fine-looking, but externally short-sighted Duke, Orsino. The clarity of this trio's enunciation tied the central story of the play neatly together.

Naturally an abbreviated version of a play that is perfectly rounded in its uncut form must leave something to be desired, but Mr. Stevens' adaptation is a fast-moving one that sticks tightly to the skeleton of the story. The fun which Sir Toby Belch, Sir Andrew Aguecheek and Maria have with the stuffy Malvolio receives much attention in this adaptation and last night's audience relished the plotting highly.

The cast was under the direction of S. Carlton Ayers, with Bess Davis Schreiner as production manager. Adele Whiteside McNaughton, Elinor Evans, Lorna Smith, Mary Fulton, Carol Rietske and Elisa Whitman were the members of the distaff side of a cast that was completed by J. Edmond Veitch, Maurice Jarvis, William Milton, Wade Robinson, Wilfley Henn, Robert Reynolds, Paul Whippeau, Hugh C. Smith, Clarence Ruebsam, Theodore Frankel and Henry Van Bens.

As with the other plays in the summer Festival series, "Twelfth Night" was presented by the Community Center Department and the Office of the National Capital Parks.

RICHARD L. COE.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 1.—Gus Edwards, veteran American showman, reported today that he has won new fame as a result of Bing Crosby's new picture, "The Star Maker," which is based on Edwards' career, but that the fame is seriously embarrassing him.

HOPPER

In retirement here for several years, Gus suddenly began receiving flocks of mail when it became known that Paramount was filming a story about him and the many stars he discovered.

The only difficulty, according to Edwards, is that most of the letters are from ambitious young actors and actresses who want Gus to "discover" then just as he did Eddie Cantor, George Jessel, Lila Lee, Walter Winchell, the Lane and the Duncan sisters, and many other luminaries.

"I should go back in show business," Edwards said. "I could start a whole vaudeville circuit with the talent that is crying for me to put them to work."

Back in 1830 Gustavo Stevanich found a little cub bear lost from its mother in the Pyrenees.

At Paramount the two younger members of the dynasty, Gus and Stan Stevens, are grooming Big Boy, a 640-pound, 7-year-old Siberian grizzly, for a role in "Untamed," technicolor epic of the northern Rockies.

Big Boy is the twenty-seventh trained bear in the family dynasty.

When Gustavo died, his son, Francisco, took up the profession in Spain. Then his son, Franco, inherited the family bear-training business, and in 1880 came to the United States and settled in the Midwest, where he trained animals and ran a wagon show in the rural circuit.

If Charles Laughton has anything to say about it, his acting protege, Maureen O'Hara, will keep her girlish laughter. Miss O'Hara, who is 18, auburn haired and hazel eyed, is the Dublin girl whom Laughton plucked from the Irish capital's famed Abbey School of the Theater, to play the feminine lead opposite him in "Jamaica Inn," filmed under the direction of Alfred Hitchcock from the Daphne Du Maurier story.

On the basis of all this and Miss O'Hara's long-term contract to Laughton, it might be supposed he would want her "glamorized," as is the custom with movie beauties.

"Don't make her glamorous!" is Laughton's stern dictum to his studio associates, to the make-up specialists, the portrait photographers and everyone else having to do with Miss O'Hara.

The little 18-year-old Occidental College co-ed named Mildred Coles, who makes her movie debut in "Our Neigbors—the Carters" at Paramount, has had her name changed to Gloria Carter, and she is having trouble about it at home. She was telling Craven about it today.

"Last night my father called me Milly, and I told him hereafter I should be called Gloria," she said. "And my father said, 'Nuts, you're Milly around here, and go and wash the dishes.'"

Martha Raye, victim of an allergy that induces violent sneezing spells and rashes, and is caused, her physician says, by dogs, today was ordered by him to either dispose of her six canine pets or submit to a year-long series of serum injections. Martha refused to give up the pets, and will undergo her first medical treatment to correct the condition immediately.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Aug. 1 (INS).—That unexcelled opportunist, Gabriel Pascal, cables from London that "Major Barbara" goes into production at the Pinewood Studio the last of September with the full co-operation of 83-year-old George Bernard Shaw. And don't think G. B. won't give advice. He watched every foot of "Pygmalion" and takes all the credit. Pascal stars Wendy Hiller, of "Pygmalion" fame, with John Mills, who made a hit on the London stage in "Of Mice and Men," as her leading man.

LOUELLA PARSONS

I'll say for Gabriel that he has lined up an impressive list of English talent for his Shavian cinema, including that splendid actor, Ralph Richardson, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Jean Cadell, Marie Lohr and Sybil Thorndike. With all this British atmosphere, he makes one gesture to Hollywood methods and that is Marian Baldwin, a local P. A., who is handling his production in London.

Even though "You Can't Cheat An Honest Man," the last W. C. Fields-Edgar Bergen-Charlie McCarthy epic rated no critical praise, it was a money-maker. And who do you think the fans wrote and asked to see again? Mortimer Snurd, no less—Charlie McCarthy's greatest rival. So Mortimer, the half-wit dummy, who was introduced after McCarthy's unparalleled success, gets a fat part in "Charlie McCarthy, Detective." Their rivalry will be played up, with their pal, Edgar, trying to act as peacemaker. Edward Eliscu has been engaged by Universal to write the script, which is set for October production.

Norma Shearer and George Raft saw the New York World's Fair together, if you please, with Norma returning to her hotel at 4 a. m. She telephoned some of her friends that she had the time of her life and that George is so popular, that everywhere they went the kids yelled, "Hello, Georgie." However, there'll be no European vacation for George this year. As soon as he finishes his fling in New York, he'll take himself to Hot Springs, Ark., and get rid of 15 superfluous pounds. Then he returns to star in "Invisible Stripes," a Warden Lawes story. Hal Wallis read it over the week-end and decided to postpone "Patent Leather Kid" and start this one without delay with George in the top role.

If a star can be said to be born overnight, that's what happened to Linda Darnell after the preview of "Hotel for Women." Darryl Zanuck never expected there'd be so much talk about the little Southern girl and so he had given her a secondary role in "Drums Along the Mohawk." Rather than have Linda make her next appearance in a supporting role, he has taken her out of the picture starring Claudette Colbert and Henry Fonda, although three weeks' shooting had already been done on location. This is almost unprecedented in the history of movies, but there are so few girls who go over as Linda has, that Darryl isn't taking any chance. Dorris Bowden, the cute little girl who made such a favorable impression in "Young Mr. Lincoln," steps into "Drums."

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The Woody Van Dykes will welcome a third child in the early winter. She is Eddie Mannix's niece; Dorothy Lamour, beaued by Bob Ritchie, was having herself a time at the Troc with Bob, Howard Hughes and Pat Di Cicco, all in the same party. June Lang was there with James McKinley Bryant and not three tables away was young Hal Roach, jr., who used to take June to these night spots. Young Hal was with his pretty sister, Margaret; "Bugs" Baer, one of the country's foremost humorists, getting a closeup of Hollywood social life at the Hope Hampton-Jules Brulatour party; Wayne Morris and his pretty bride were there with her mother, who looks very young. Wayne is that excited over the expected arrival of the stork in December. The Brulatours leave on Saturday, after a month in Hollywood.

Lillian Emerson, the socialite once reported engaged to Phil Reed, is here with her bridegroom, Herbert Boscowitz. Mrs. Sam Wood entertained for them Monday night and they leave later in the week for Honolulu; Sol Lesser becomes a grandfather in October, when the stork leaves a package for his son, Julian; Lionel Barrymore is in the Good Samaritan Hospital for a general checkup; Mrs. Walter Lang (Fieldsy), who is there with her 5-day-old son, has had many of her calls go to the Cedars, where there is another Mrs. Walter Lang, who is very sick. Fieldsy is doing very well; Irene Dunne is entertaining Elizabeth Alexandra and her mother, Mrs. Guy Torrey. Elizabeth had a lot of publicity when she was mentioned as Brenda Frazier's greatest rival; Frank Fay and Bert Wheeler, two inseparables, stepping out with Midge and Virginia Foster, two beauties; Louise Campbell is battling laryngitis; Bobbie Mullineaux, who was once Linn Howard's flame, is now going places with Joseph Allen, jr.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Your Figure Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain.

Television Star Says Hour's Exercise Each Day Does Wonders

ONE OF THESE days you will press a little button on your television set and, presto, a glamour girl will put on an act right in your living room! Television won't be like the movies, where it is so blessedly dark that no woman ever thinks of contrasting the lovely star with herself. There she will be! And there you will be, too!

The new entertainment stars will, of course, be beautiful and streamlined. Unlike the movie stars, they will not be able to rely too strongly on the magic of makeup, for very little makeup is used. Certainly they cannot be overweight! The telecast camera adds an apparent 10 pounds to actual weight. Unless they are radiantly healthy, they will lack that vital sparkle.

But if Caryl Smith, elected the first Miss Television, is an example, it will be quite all right for the average woman to copy the beauty programs of these stars. It almost seems as if Caryl might have been chosen on the basis of her diet and exercise! Something must have made her stand out among 360 other handpicked beauties.

One Hour a Day

Here's what she does for exercise: Fences, plays tennis, roller skates, swims, bicycles, dances. She thinks all a woman has to do to acquire a really lovely figure is to have an hour's workout daily in dancing or in rhythmical calisthenics. That's all there is to it, she thinks.

Her own figure is a convincing argument that she might be right: Bust, 34 inches; waist, 23 inches; hips, 34 inches. She is 5 feet 7¾ inches tall, and has the carriage of a duchess. She weighs only 123 pounds, but thanks to all that exercise there are no angles.

She has such a good skin that she doesn't use powder. There are probably several reasons for that, the first being a marvelous circulation. Then, she believes in meticulous cleanliness and scrubs her face with soap and water night and morning. She likes almond oil as an additional cleanser and a lubricant. Her diet helps, too. Her favorite foods are fruit, vegetables and milk—she drinks two quarts a day! She believes her diet is the reason she never has a cold and is plenty smart about it; takes codliver oil, drinks quantities of fruit juice, eats whole wheat bread. And, another thing—she starts the day off with a good breakfast and never skips a meal! But for luncheon she often has a salad of some kind and never takes desserts.

Menu Offered

If that's what the television stars are going to be like, hurray! They will be an inspiration, and we predict that the average woman of tomorrow will be better than average looking if she follows a similar course.

Sheer Black Wool for Fall

Sculptored to flatter the figure, this black dress of sheerest wool is the perfect in-between season frock. Made along simple lines, it is the essence of chic sophistication. Besides being ideal for late summer and early autumn wear, it is a perfect background dress for costume jewelry. Small tucks at the front of the shoulder instead of the top give a new and interesting broad-shoulder effect. The ornament is a rose in a quaint design of two-tone gold with diamonds. Designed by Annette Simpson.

If We Were They

"Hello, John! Whaddye know?"

"Nothing much except they're having the most marvelous sale you ever heard of at Tweed's."

"Say, they're simply giving things away at Worsted's."

"Well, I want to tell you I bought myself the darlingest little mohair two-trouser suit you ever saw in your life at Tweed's—for simply nothing. It just fits too cute for anything."

"I got a perfectly adorable little derby at Worsted's—"

"I bet you look cute in it. I'm mad about derbies, but I can't wear 'em. Grace simply has a fit—"

"Why, I think you'd look darling in a derby."

"Well—Grace is peculiar. Say, they're having a grand sale of perfectly lovely undershirts at Tweed's."

"Say, I wouldn't be caught dead in an undershirt. Nobody wears 'em any more."

"That's what I try to tell Grace. Of course, she's a little peculiar."

"I know. So is Julia. Say, guess who I saw at Worsted's. Old Bill Skitter! Yes! He had bought himself some of the cutest little orange and white striped shorts you ever saw in your life."

"Well, Bill always does look cute in his clothes."

"Oh, and I wish you could have seen the darling little swim suit he had. Leopard skin!"

"I'm simply dying for one."

"So am I. But Grace—well, she's a little peculiar."

"That's the way with Julia."

You turn the pages of the paper slowly. Now, there's something you ought to read—that piece about the Presidential candidates. Everybody's talking about that . . . Snip, snip . . . you'll just cut it out and read it carefully when you have more time.

Oh, and here's something else, this International Congress of Women! You really ought to keep informed on that . . . Snip, snip . . . You'll save that, too.

Now here's an interesting piece about antique silver . . . snip, snip . . . you might want to refer to that some time . . . and you must save that historical article about the old Van Hornet place . . . snip, snip.

Here—this looks like a lovely little poem. "The Dying Summer" . . . snip, snip . . . you'll put it in your pocketbook and read it on the street car. Oh, yes, and these exercises to reduce the hips for the new fall bustles . . . snip, snip . . . you'll get busy on them next week.

Here's a piece about the Japanese situation . . . snip, snip . . . you'll read that when you have more time . . . and, Oh, what darling puppies in that picture . . . . snip, snip . . . you must save them . . . and then of course this column by Percy Hammertong—you save all his columns . . . snip, snip . . . and this new map of the Balkans . . . snip, snip . . . and this recipe for baked Alaska . . . snip, snip . . . and this psychoanalysis of Hitler snip, snip . . .

You reach the funnies. What are the Horace Nitwits doing today? . . . Ha! ha! ha! That's pretty good; Snip, snip . . . You'll send that to Cousin Eunice.

You fold the paper, pile your clippings neatly, and lean back with a sigh of relief. Well, that's over.

Social Note

(From the Truthtown Torch)

Mr. and Mrs. Artemus Biggerwig Clack announce the engagement of their daughter, Geraldine, to Mr. Chauncey Dizzard Fossil, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Juniper Fossil. The date of the wedding will depend upon how soon Mr. Fossil can make a satisfactory connection in trade.

Miss Clack is descended from two famous Revolutionary families. On her mother's side she dates back to Adam Stalactite who was executed for treason following the battle of Yorktown. On her father's side she is a descendant of John Biggerwig, the famous patriot who was represented in the Revolutionary forces by two hired mercenaries.

Mr. Fossil, through the Dizzard branch of his family, goes back to William the Conqueror, his ancestor being Dork the Diz, who was personal shield polisher to the Norman invader. Mr. Fossil is connected with the famous Fossil family of New York financiers. His uncle, Xerxes P. Fossil, is now in Federal custody at Atlanta.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Boy of 16, Backward in School, Is Often in Trouble Over Petty Misdemeanors; Sister Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We are all very much worried about my brother. Mother died when he was seven. Father has since been remarried, to a nice woman. To get to the point, the other day Brother and another boy broke some windows in a vacant house. The window glass cost about $7.50. The owner says he doesn't care about the glass, but he believes if the boys are let off for this offense, they may get into more serious trouble later. He wants Father to bring Brother out to him to discuss the matter.

Father says Brother should be sent to the Training School for Boys; that it might help him. (But, of course, he doesn't mean it. It would break his heart if this should happen). You see, my brother was almost sent to the Reformatory for flourishing a gun on the school's playground. He has since been caught at petty things.

He is almost 16, and has stuttered since an automobile accident. He was in the fourth grade three successive years. I don't think it was entirely his fault, however, as the family moved several times during that period. Today he is just in the seventh grade, and Mother (my stepmother) says he can learn, but won't. I suspect a boy who is 5 feet 6 inches tall feels out of place in a room with younger children.

I have suggested to Father that he take Brother to the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, but before we take any steps, we would like to have your advice. We really don't know what to do. WORRIED.

Problem for Experts

DEAR WORRIED: Your brother is fortunate in having a sister with so much common sense and intuitive understanding. His is, indeed, a problem requiring expert analysis, and your idea of enlisting the services of the Child Guidance Clinic of the Institute of Mental Hygiene is the sanest suggestion that has been offered, apparently, by any member of the family.

Those who would help him should take the trouble to learn why he is having school difficulties and behavior problems—since these are symptomatic of some inner personality stress. So, too, is his stuttering. While his father means well in threatening reform school discipline, such threats are bound to be more destructive than constructive in their effect upon your brother's behavior.

One agrees, of course, with the outraged property owner, that the boys must be taught the error of their ways, lest they get into more serious trouble later. But scolding and bull-dozing are not to be confused with really helpful education. You are on the right track, and I hope that your father and brother can be persuaded to cooperate with you. M. H.

How to Win Friends?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 18, and I feel that my life is doomed unless there is soon a change for the better. I used to have lots of friends, but all of them have drifted away, except for my boy friend and one girl, who does not have and never has had a boy friend. The girls whose friendship I really valued are very cool, almost formal.

It was due to my boy friend that I have come to realize the seriousness of the situation. When my name comes up in his conversations with others, they always ask him what he sees in me. They say I am attractive enough; that I am nice; but that I seem queer—too distant and cool. People who never knew me well enough to pass an opinion speak of my "queerness." Or they say I may be nice after you know me, but it takes too long to know me.

Lately I have been thinking of trying to restore old friendships and that way make new ones. Do you think this is possible? And how shall I go about it? As I have said before, some think I am cool and distant. How does one overcome such attitudes as these? I shall be forever grateful for any advice. MARGE.

Attributes of Charm

DEAR MARGE: On the Sunday Household page of this newspaper, a series of weekly articles is now being published, in which the author, Mary McDougall Axelson, is seeking to analyze and define the essence and the attributes of charm. She is studying charm first-hand in Hollywood. What does she find? In one article alone, that of July 23, you will find this scintillating list of attributes: sincerity, vivacity, friendliness, beauty, talent, freshness, happy heartedness, jolly neighborliness, generosity, fire, vitality and expansiveness.

"Vitality and expansiveness—a flinging out of their secret fires," writes Mrs. Axelson, of Hollywood's best liked and most successful younger girls. "Let the indolent, the withdrawn and the reserved take note." Does this sharp warning apply to you? I think it does.

When you had friends, you took them for granted, no doubt; supposed it was enough to accept their friendship without giving them glowing return for favorable notice received. When, euphemistically, you describe yourself as "cool and distant," what you really mean—but shrink from saying—is that you are "dull." You have no sparkle—no fire, no zest, no enthusiasm. You are self engrossed, not interested in others. You have, in short, no vitality and no expansiveness.

Everyone who had an adequate choice of other companions gradually dropped you. Only two remain—a boy who happens to care for you enough to make the effort really to know your better qualities, buried deep beneath your top layers of slothful indifference; and one girl who probably hangs around you because no one else can be bothered with her. And would you be bothered, if you had a choice?

The best advice I can give you—and, of course, your personality can be made over, and your friends recaptured, and new ones added—is to cultivate those qualities which Mrs. Axelson reports are universal concomitants of charm—with friendliness, vivacity, sincerity, good humor and generosity heading the list. Learn Shorthand at Home

A CHANCE at a job—says that little white card from the employment agency! And why, you may be thinking, doesn't such a chance come your way?

Are you one of those who go after "any job," have "nothing special" to offer? Acquire a skill such as shorthand—and do as the employment experts advise, go after A job instead of ANY job.

Shorthand is an art you can easily learn at home. Those mysterious "squiggles" you see in stenographer's notebooks are simple enough when you have the key—know that Pitman shorthand is based on the sound of words, not on their spelling. For each sound, there's a shorthand symbol—and there aren't many different sounds in the language.

By learning a few symbols a day you're soon able to write many of the words used in business dictation, are ready to have Sis or Dad dictate to you, slowly at first, then more rapidly.

Read your notes over often. That increases your "reading speed," gives you the confidence of an experienced stenographer when you get your job.

Our 40-page booklet, PITMAN SHORTHAND SELF-TAUGHT, clearly explains the principles of Pitman shorthand, gives in 15 simple lessons basic symbols, word signs, phrase forms. Tells how to acquire the speed, accuracy you need for business dictation, lecture notes.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, PITMAN SHORTHAND SELF-TAUGHT, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: The newspapermen on assignment at the fair pass the dog days as best they can, picking up items here and there and amusing themselves as well as possible. The Times has one of its best men, Meyer Berger, out there snaffling items, and he gets a kick out of thinking up droll names for the place. Two of his best are "Mad Meadow" and "Brainstorm Bog." All in a summer's work . . .

When you trudge along Thirty-fourth street, don't swoon when you see a pretty young lady skating away on a rink in a store window—the latest move in the current frenzy for store windows that move, make sounds and even smell nice. The girl is Eileen Brokaw, a tiny creature weighing 100 pounds, and she works on an artificial rink measuring only 6 feet by 12. Very cute and crowd-pleasing idea—and the stunt is to exploit a home air-conditioning unit.

War scares have cut European sailings about 33 1-3 per cent, is the latest dope. Tourists are preferring South America, but our gallant store buyers and executives from all over the Nation are still embarking for that crazy cauldron to dig up the latest style hunches from a mad continent.

MEANWHILE, here in the East the drought of July was the worst on record. New England's farmers are suffering, our own parks and gardens have been gray and forlorn, and even the New York escapists have had to watch their well-water carefully. Prayers for rain have mingled with those for peace, and I hope that by the time this sees print our part of the Nation will have had a thorough drenching.

A PRETTY 18-year-old girl named Sylvia Avit made the parachute jump at the fair a few nights ago with screen actor John Boles, and she is still all thrills and tingles.

Dick Merrill, the flier, and his blonde wifelet, Toby Wing, can't get together on a nickname for their baby. Dick dubs him "Squatto," while Toby calls him "Windy." Why not settle for Hey, You.

NANCY LEVERING has thought up a new service here. She handles all details of sailing or arriving—handles trunk keys and customs, arranges deck chairs and corsages and bottles of wine and new books. All going-away presents and things for friends and sweethearts can safely be turned over to Nancy. She puts 'em through.

Guest Food Editor Designs Refreshing Summer Dessert

Fresh Fruit Used in Combination With Cake, Served With Plenty Of Cream, Is Miss Dubois Pet Recipe

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

DURING THE SUMMER hostesses often like to serve something besides icy desserts and yet have those that are refreshing and light. Miss Katherine DuBois, our guest food editor today, has a design for such a dessert — individual fruit filled cakes—which are a combination of easy-to-prepare cake batter and fresh berries.

Miss DuBois

Miss DuBois is a New York State girl from the Hudson River Valley and was educated at Simmons College, Boston. Following her graduation, she taught cooking for a few years before going into restaurant work. Miss DuBois was formerly associated with the celebrated Alice Foote MacDougall Coffee Shops of New York City. At present she is manager of the employes' cafeteria of the Frank R. Jelleff organization.

When Miss DuBois was asked for her favorite recipe, she said, "There are many marvelous dishes possible during the summer with so many fresh fruits and vegetables available. Perhaps best of all I like fresh fruit used in combination with cake and served with plenty of rich cream.

Individual Fruit Filled Cakes

Cream ½ cup shortening and 1 cup sugar together until fluffy and light. Add 1 egg and beat well. Sift 2¼ cups sifted soft wheat flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder and ¼ teaspoon salt together. Add flour and milk alternately to the creamed mixture. Add 1 teaspoon flavoring. Pour into greased individual baking cups into each of which has been placed 2 tablespoons of the fruit mixture. Bake 30 minutes in a moderately hot oven, 375 degrees. To make the fruit mixture, combine 1 cup fruit and juice with 1 tablespoon flour and ¼ cup sugar. Pour into a greased mold. Makes 8 individual servings.

Mrs. Roosevelt Inspires Poem by Her Remarks

Mrs. Francis Biddle Contributes Verses To National Magazine After Hearing Exhortation to Interpret American Scene

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor

MRS. ROOSEVELT probably doesn't know it yet, but some remarks she made several months ago urging creative women to turn their energies to interpreting the American scene were the inspiration for a long poem in the August issue of a nationally known magazine.

The occasion of the First Lady's speech was the annual stunt party of the Women's National Press Club, and the author of the poem, "Plain Chant for America," is Katherine Garrison Chapin, who was one of the honor guests.

Known in private life as Mrs. Francis Biddle, she formerly was a resident of Washington back in the days when her husband was counsel for the TVA. He's now Judge of the Third Federal District, and he and his wife make their home in Philadelphia. At present, however, they are vacationing at Harvey Cedars, N. J., where they have been the past three weeks. Some time this month, Mrs. Biddle plans to be off to New Mexico for a brief stay.

The 38-line poem, which, incidentally, is not of the "pink tea" variety (Mrs. Biddle doesn't go in for that kind), paints an impressive picture of America, admitting some of its faults but ending on an optimistic note. It appears in the Ladies Home Journal.

Diplomatic Circling:

The Greek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos, who has been "commuting" between Washington and the Greek pavilion at the World's Fair a good part of the summer, will leave today for another visit in New York. Later, he probably will go to Hot Springs, Va., for several weeks.

Vacation plans for Faik Konitza, former Albanian Minister, are in a nebulous state these days. He had expected to leave early this month for Swampscott, Mass., where he has spent the past 14 summers. But, any minute now, he may get word to return to Europe for an important conference, so he is staying on in his Mayflower apartment.

If he doesn't sail soon, however, he will go to the Massachusetts resort around the middle of the month and will be there for at least five weeks.

Plan Trip to West Coast

The Counselor of the Norwegian Legation and Mme. Jorgen Galbe, accompanied by their daughters, Keri and Grete, will leave Saturday for a motor trip to the West Coast. They will go by the southern route, return by the northern and get back just in time for the girls to enter school in the autumn.

Off to New York today will go Fritz Real, Attache of the Swiss Legation, who will visit the World's Fair and attend the Swiss Symphony Concert there tomorrow evening. On Friday he will go on to Connecticut to visit his uncle, Rudolph Real, for a week.

After a vacation in this country, the United States Minister to Ireland, John Cudahy, will sail today on the Normandie to return to his post. His homeland sojourn included a brief stay in Washington and a short visit with his niece, Mrs. Harold L. Ickes.

Oddments of Interest

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Tittmann will sail August 9 for Europe, and will go directly to Geneva, where Mr. Tittmann has been assigned to duty by the State Department. . . . Miss Peyton Hawes left yesterday for Ithaca, N. Y., to visit Mr. and Mrs. Paul Holman. . . . Enlivening the Saratoga scene is Adelaide Moffett, who arrived at the racing resort Monday and started her season's engagement at the Piping Rock Club. . . . Mrs. Wirt Robinson and her daughter, Miss Evelyn Bird Robinson, who have an apartment at the Shoreham, expect to leave tomorrow for their country estate, Arrowhead, in Nelson County, Va. . . .

Mrs. William Boyce Thompson, mother of Mrs. Anthony Drexel Biddle, jr., who sails here, there and everywhere in her magnificent yacht, the Alder, recently arrived at Newport, R. I., where she is bing widely feted. Well do I remember a pleasant visit with Mrs. Thompson on her yacht once when it was anchored off Hains Point and a guest of honor on board was the Duchess de Chaulnes. The latter, who lived in Washington before her marriage, had the most complete wardrobe I ever saw—dozens of smart frocks, all designed by Molyneaux—and a hat to match each one.

Poised for Action

Harris & Ewing.

With archery the rage from one end of the East Coast to the other, Miss Angela Adams and Mrs. Edward S. Northrop are not going to be left behind and this picture proves it. Miss Adams' engagement to Barry Mohun was recently announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene G. Adams. Mrs. Northrop was Miss Barbara Burdette, of Kensington, Md., before her recent marriage

The decoration, by order of His Majesty King Gustav, was presented to Mr. Guston by proxy at the legation's celebration of the King's birthday, June 16, but because he was not here Mr. Guston did not actually receive the decoration until this week.

After leaving Washington the Gustons will go to Philadelphia for a visit. Mr. Guston is head of a large manufacturing company.

From Philadelphia they will go to New York, where they will sail the latter part of the month for Sweden.

Miss Tobias and her sister, the former Miss Catherine Tobias, came to Washington the first part of last June, and the former was maid of honor at her sister's wedding when Miss Catherine Tobias became the bride of Robert Murphy, of Hartford, Conn., on June 10 at the chapel in Fort Belvoir, Va. Since the wedding and until about two weeks ago, Miss Jane Tobias has been visiting another aunt and uncle, Capt. and Mrs. Clifton T. Huht, at their quarters at Fort Belvoir.

Capt. and Mrs. Tighe will stop off in Columbia, S. C., for a brief visit with Mrs. Tighe's sister, Mrs. Henry W. Tobias, mother of Miss Jane Tobias. Mrs. Tobias and her daughter may join the caravan and accompany the Tighes to Mexico City.

Miss Jane Tobias, who has been studying at the University of South Carolina, may enter George Washington University this fall.

Capt. and Mrs. Tighe's home at 2350 South Nash street, Arlington, has been leased to Commander Noah W. Gokey, United States Navy, and Mrs. Gokey, who will arrive in Washington from Philadelphia about August 10. Commander Gokey has ben ordered to duty at the Navy Department here.

Sails With Wife Aug. 10 For 20-Day Trip; Goes To Idaho at Conclusion

Aboard the S. S. Panama on August 10, Senator and Mrs. D. Worth Clark will sail for Panama, "just for the rest." The Clarks had hoped to leave on Thursday, but with adjournment of Congress still hanging fire, they delayed their reservations.

The cruise will take about 20 days in all and the Clarks have no definite plans, but will do their sightseeing as the notion strikes them. Returning on August 29, the Senator will leave immediately for his home in Pocatello, Idaho, while Mrs. Clark remains here.

Panama would seem to be a popular spot with officials these days. Leaving for there on Thursday are the Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, who will be accompanied by their three children, Marcus, Melissa and Cooper Coolidge.

The Woodrings' trip, which was something of a secret until the news leaked out, is entirely unofficial. They will sail aboard the Ancon—christened last fall by Mrs. Woodring—returning to New York on August 21. From there Mrs. Woodring, with the children, will go to Fitchburg, Mass., to visit her parents, former Senator and Mrs. Marcus Coolidge, for a month or so.

Council Aids First Voters Of the South

Helen Fuller Tells Of Program to Help Young People Learn Of Their Region

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor

"First voters" of the 13 Southern States are taking study of government in sugar-coated doses this summer and liking it, according to Miss Helen Fuller, president of the Council of Young Southerners, which she helped to found.

The council has 31 members, including representatives of such youth organizations as religious, rural, student, recreational and service agencies in the various States. "We do not intend to launch a new youth movement or to enlist members," says Miss Fuller, "but to offer the council's services to already established organizations in starting forums—groups of young people between the ages of 20 and 25—and encouraging them in a study of their own problems from the social, political and economic standpoints."

Miss Fuller came here from Birmingham, Ala., three years ago at the age of 22, a member of the Alabama Bar, with an appointment as a special attorney in the Department of Justice. Recently she has taken a new position as administrative assistant in the National Youth Administration.

She has fair hair, combed smoothly back from her forehead; clear blue eyes and a clear, fresh complexion. In other words, she looks like the kind of a person you would expect to see at the head of a wholesome, intelligent youth group.

Mary Jean McKay Among Founders

With her in founding the council six months ago were Mary Jean McKay, of Florida, now president of the National Student Federation; Howard Lee, of Arkansas, who is secretary in charge of the Nashville office, and William McKee, student secretary for the Y. W. C. A. in the South.

"The council is non-political, but is eager to co-operate with all who desire to help youth of the Southern States," Miss Fuller explained. "It is not to replace any similar organization but to integrate and implement present agencies by co-operating with all special-interest groups which share our faith in the South."

The field staff and the council integrate all 13 State committees and supply facilities which these groups are unable to obtain elsewhere. The State committees themselves carry their programs into each county of their respective States. Money is contributed by Southerners interested in the project.

The plan of the council is not to preach the necessity of an active interest in how our democracy works and in helping to make the wheels go 'round. It has a much more appealing procedure. For instance, it gathers together in a First Voters' Club young people who will cast their first votes at the next election. A plan for a play is suggested to them—a play staged like "Our Town," without the complication of costumes and scenery, and based on their own town.

Learn to Study Home Town Problems

They write it themselves; with the purpose of using it as a vehicle to present to older persons, the problems of youth in their own community. At the outset, they find it necessary to secure facts. Committees are appointed which consult the superintendent of schools, bankers, business heads and city officials. The group works out situations and their sequence, decides on cue lines but otherwise those taking part are free to say the lines which fit the plot just as they would in real life. The result, says Miss Fuller, is a spontaneous and convincing portrayal.

The play is given for church, school and recreation groups and is a means of drawing other young people to the First Voters' forum. The interest in community problems, awakened by digging up facts for the home town production, continues in serious study projects. Each State adapts the program to its own needs. The form it takes is the outgrowth of the young people's interests. Young Southerners by the hundreds are joining hands in the new enterprise of learning to be alert, intelligent voters. "Stay South, Young Man," is the slogan on the folder outlining the council's aims.

A chapter in the forthcoming report of the American Youth Commission will be devoted to the council.

Young Southerners' Council Interests Senators

Members of Congress from the Southern States have evinced an interest in the program of the Council of Young Southerners founded six months ago by four youth leaders. Among the founders are Miss Helen Fuller, formerly of Birmingham, Ala., shown at the desk with Senator Walter F. George, of Georgia, and Miss Mary Jean McKay, of Florida, president of the National Student Federation, who is standing between Senator Lister Hill, of Alabama (left), and Senator Claude Pepper, of her State

Panhellenic Head Leaving City Before Having Chance to Serve

Mrs. Eugene Burgess to Be Succeeded As President by Miss Edythe Thompson, Her Alternate From Phi Omega Pi Sorority

The City Panhellenic Association which last spring elected Mrs. Eugene Burgess, delegate from Phi Omega Pi, as president, is losing her as its head before she has had a chance to serve in her official capacity. She is moving the middle of August from her home in East Falls Church, Va., to New York City, and Miss Edythe Thompson, her alternate from Phi Omega Pi in the Panhellenic, automatically succeeds her.

Mrs. Burgess will meet this week with Miss Thompson, who lives at Strong residence of the Y. W. C. A., and Miss Miriam Johnson, of Beta Phi Alpha, vice president, to line up the program for the coming season.

Heretofore the association has confined itself to one large social function each year—its spring luncheon always attended by several hundred guests. It was decided to broaden the program during the coming season to include a study of sorority problems on campus and off.

All National Societies Included

The city Panhellenic was formed cludes alumnae of the 23 Greek letter societies in the national association, finds itself in a position to be of help to the active chapters, not only at American and George Washington Universities here but also at the University of Maryland.

The new program provided for a series of three meetings. The first will be for Panhellenic delegates and alternates and representatives from the college Panhellenic councils. Discussion will be devoted to problems of the active chapters and alumnae and active chapter co-operation. The second will be a meeting addressed by a speaker to which three or four representatives will be invited from each sorority. The third will be a round table discussion.

Make Gift to Aid Needy

The City Panhellenic was formed in 1931, and has a membership of more than 2,000. This spring, following the annual luncheon, a gift of $100 was made to Central Admitting Bureau for Hospitals from the luncheon proceeds, and a talking book for the blind was purchased with the proceeds of that held in 1935.

Mrs. Burgess, in the midst of packing and preparing for her departure to New York, is completing the work of her brief term of office, and also assisting in preparations for the visit Monday of two national officers, Miss Marjorie Langenbahn, of New York City, and Miss Frances Cummings, of New Jersey. Mrs. Shelby Faulkner, president of the local alumnae chapter, is arranging to welcome them, and the local sorority members will entertain in their honor.

Business Group of Hadassah Welcomes Forty Initiates at Membership Party

Washington Hadassah's Business and Professional group, following the lead of the senior organization, last night held a member-bring-a-member party. It was a supper in the garden at the home of Mrs. Charles Oshinsky, 1627 Jonquil street, with colored lights, music and even a cool breeze.

There were 75 present, and 40 new members were welcomed.

Miss Hannah Bigelow was chairman of the affair. Miss Rebecca Rosenblum, the president, presented the entertainers and the speaker, Mrs. Raphael Tourover, past president of the senior Hadassah. Mrs. Tourover outlined the aims of the organization and told of its accomplishments during the past three years.

The musical program was given by students of Sylvia Kaplowitz, Kitty Keyboard Kapers, a group of accordionists under the direction of Richard Bralove.

Mrs. Leo Babinowitz assisted in arrangements for the party.

MAY THOMPSON EVANS, assistant to Mrs. Thomas H. McAllister, director of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee, has just returned from a three-week vacation in New York, and Mrs. McAllister has gone to Rockport, Mass., for hers. Both are making the most of their summer holidays this year as they don't expect to have time for any next season, with November looming large on the horizon.

Democratic women throughout the country are working without a let-up, says Mrs. Evans. They are now preparing for a Nation-wide celebration of Women's Democratic Day, which has been set for September 16. It will be a money-raising project for the party like the Jackson Day celebration held annually by the men. Mrs. Roosevelt's often expressed desire that the women participate in party activities on a 50-50 basis is responsible for the inauguration of the plan.

In October, the last of five regional conferences of Democratic women will be held in Salt Lake City, Utah, conducted by Mrs. McAllister and Mrs. Evans, who will make side trips into adjacent States to address women's groups. They feel encouraged over the interest of women of the party in the "six-point program" reported by those coming to headquarters here. Yesterday Mrs. John Weeks, of Little Rock, Ark., publicity director for her State, was here, and two days ago Mrs. Ethel Sharp, of Tulsa, Okla., vice chairman for her county.

Takoma Park Rally Protests New Bus Line

Keep Butternut St. Trolleys, Provide Streamlined Cars, Resolution Urges

A mass meeting of Takoma Park area residents last night opposed Capital Transit Co.'s proposed move to substitute buses for street cars on the Butternut street line.

The rally was in the Takoma Park branch of the District Library, under auspices of the Takoma Park (District and Maryland) Citizens Association.

In a resolution introduced by Dr. Guy Clinton, chairman of the association public utility committee, the residents urged that instead of discontinuing the car line, the transit company should improve the service by substitution of streamlined cars and provide a suitable turntable in Takoma Park.

Transit Offer Rejected

The citizens voted their disapproval of an offer by E. D. Merrill, Capital Transit president, to establish a shuttle from Georgia avenue to Butternut street.

Alternatives, he told the meeting, would be either addition of 19 streamliners on the Georgia avenue-District line run or addition of 11 cars running north of Pennsylvania avenue to the District line.

Merrill said that the company could not build a loop for the Butternut line this year, but held out promise for the future.

ADD three Takoma B

The resolution protesting discontinuance of the street-car line asserted that street cars are safer and more dependable than buses, especially on icy streets; that it would be more economical to continue the line; that the service on the Butternut line is not in excess of community needs as claimed by the company; that the same number of cars would have to be added to the Georgia avenue-District line run as would be taken off the Butternut run.

Economy Claimed

Other points offered in the resolution declared that if new one-man streamline cars were placed on the Butternut street route, the line could be operated at less expense; that the convenience of the new cars would divert patronage from the buses and make the Butternut street service more nearly adequate.

Should buses be placed on the route despite their protests, the citizens urged that enough buses be placed into service amply to take care of the rush hours.

William McK. Clayton, chairman of the public utility committee of the District Federation of Citizens Association and vice president of the Brightwood Citizens Association, warned the group not to "surrender what you have unless you get something better."

Discussion Tonight

Other speakers were Reed F. Martin, president of the Takoma Park organization, who served as chairman of the meeting; Dean J. Locke, transit company engineer; Patricia Hickman, O. H. P. Scott, Dr. C. C. Galloway, Dr. William A. Hooker, L. C. Mitchell, Burt W. Andrews, L. W. Liddy, Ira Pearlman, D. G. Guyan, J. B. Kinnear, Walter Lambert, John Walker, J. W. Coffman, William H. McClenon, Dr. H. E. Ewing.

Tonight at 7, the Takoma Park Chamber of Commerce will discuss the issue at a dinner meeting in Nick's restaurant, Carroll avenue. A representative of Capital Transit will be among the speakers.

Capper Denies That D. C. Is Tax Paradise

Blames Ignorance of Congress for Defeat Of Overton Formula

A denial that the District is a tax paradise was made by Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, yesterday in an annual address to the Senate in behalf of national representation for Washington's voteless residents.

At the same time Senator Capper, ranking minority member of the Senate District Committee, criticized members of Congress for failure of familiarize themselves with local problems and blamed defeat of the Overton fiscal formula on misunderstanding and ignorance.

"The unfriendly attitude of some of the members of Congress," Capper said, "toward these voteless and unrepresented Americans can be in part attributed to the lack of political rights.

Blames Lack of Knowledge

"However, I am constrained to believe that much of such manifestation of unfriendliness is due to the lack of knowledge of the true conditions prevailing in the District and the circulation of misleading statements which lack even the slightest essence of truth."

Discussing the Overton formula, Senator Capper said it was defeated "through prejudice based on misunderstanding and lack of knowledge of the true status of the District of Columbia."

"Someone has referred to Washington as 'the best known and at the same time the most unknown community in the world; the most misunderstood of all.' After a service of more than 20 years in the Senate and continuous membership on the Senate District Committee throughout that period I am ready to approve that statement."

Favors National Representation

Senator Capper said he would not favor local suffrage until national representation is allowed. He likewise questioned the wisdom of reorganizing the District government without providing for national and local elective machinery.

"Whatever kind of local government the District is given," he said, "is apt to prove unsatisfactory while a Congress, in which it is not represented, continues to exercise without let or hindrance, its power of exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever.

"That has been a source of weakness in local government here in the past, and history has a way of repeating itself."

Bus Drivers Win Pay Raise, End Strike

Arlington and Fairfax Lines Employes in Three-Hour Walkout

Drivers of the Arlington & Fairfax Motor Transportation Co. and Arlington & Fairfax Auto Railroad Co., won a 2-cent an hour pay increase after a three-hour strike yesterday, union officials announced.

Thirty-five drivers asked a 10-cent an hour increase over their 45-cent an hour wage, and a closed shop at the start of the strike. Union President A. Shifflet said he was pleased at the speedy settlement, adding that with improvement in business the union would seek further increases.

Franklin K. Lane, president of the two bus companies, said the firms were operating with a $42,000 annual pay roll now, and that last year the net income was little more than $1,000. He said the firm would be unable to stand the added expense of meeting the 10-cent increase sought by the drivers.

Under the agreement ending the brief strike, a modified closed shop plan was approved, whereby present nonunion employes will not be required to join, while new employes will become members of the union.

14 Policemen, Cleared by FBI, Take New Posts

Delayed Promotions Cause Officers to Lose $150 in Pay

Fourteen promoted police officers, cleared of any suspicion in the Federal Bureau of Investigation's current probe, were sworn in yesterday by Maj. Ernest Brown after the District Commissioners ended a two-week delay and approved a list of 15 promotions.

The Commissioners were informed informally by the FBI that nothing affecting the records of the 15 men had been uncovered in the inquiry, which, it was claimed, dealt mainly with Police Court procedure. No report of the FBI probe has been presented to the Commissioners.

The 15 police officers were recommended for promotion July 18, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen signing the list shortly afterward before leaving the city for a few days. Commissioners George E. Allen and David McCoach, jr., however, declined to sign the order July 20, stating they believed promotions "inadvisable" until Attorney General Frank Murphy had made public the results of the FBI investigation.

A loss of about $150 was incurred by the promoted police officers because of the two weeks' delay. The pay increases involved in promotions do not go into effect until the officers are sworn.

The officers whose promotions became effective yesterday include Lieut. Clarence Talley, First Precinct, who was raised to the rank of captain, and Detective Sergt. Robert J. Barrett, promoted to lieutenant to fill Talley's vacancy. Both Talley and Barrett will go to the Seventh Precinct.

Other promotions included Private Guy S. Thompson, raised to sergeant, and 11 new detective sergeants who were named from the ranks of precinct detectives. The new sergeants are Frank Ashley, C. C. Carver, H. H. Carper, John O. Curtis, K. H. Davis, J. E. Ennis, William G. Fawcett, Robert J. Maghan, jr., W. D. Perry, Carl Schamp and E. E. Scott.

In addition, Harvey G. Callahan, First Precinct, was named chief clerk of the Metropolitan Department, relieving Assistant Superintendent L. I. H. Edwards, who held the position following the dismissal of Howard Crawford. Callahan, who is on vacation, could not be reached yesterday, and will be sworn in later.

Dr. Finucane Named Glenn Dale Chief

Samuel Tapp Gets Plumbing Post and A. F. Jordan Becomes Insurance Director

The District Commissioners yesterday appointed Dr. Daniel Leo Finucane, assistant superintendent at Glenn Dale Sanatoria, as superintendent and medical director of the institution; made Samuel Tapp District plumbing inspector, and, in a third appointment, Albert Fite Jordan, of Alexandria, became the District's superintendent of insurance.

The Board of Public Welfare today will meet with Robert E. Bondy, their choice to succeed Elwood Street as welfare director, for a complete discussion of the appointment.

After naming Dr. Finucane the Commissioners named Dr. J. Winthrop Peabody, the former superintendent, and Dr. Finucane's predecesor, as chief visiting consultant, at an annual salary of $3,000.

Tapp in Service 32 Years

Tapp, principal assistant inspector since 1930, has been with the District government 32 years. He came to the plumbing division in 1907 after having engaged in private plumbing business here.

He succeeds A. R. McGonegal, who retired several weeks ago. Tapp is a member of the American Society of Sanitary Engineers, American Society of Military Engineers and the Washington Society of Engineers. Since 1915, he has been secreary of the Plumbing Examining Board. He resides at 1516 Newton street northeast.

Jordan, who is 35, was described by Commissioner George E. Allen as a career man. He succeeds J. Balch Moor, who died a week ago Saturday. His salary is $5,600 a year.

Appointment Urged on Jordan

Since September, 1937, Jordan has served as rate-making expert for the District insurance department, and at no time in his career has he been employed with a private insurance company, it was stated. The appointment was urged upon Jordan, Commissioner Allen said.

Bondy's recommendation was before the Commissioners yesterday when final approval was withheld pending the outcome of today's meeting. The board's meeting will take place in the District Building at 2 p. m.

An announcement regarding the appointment is expected following the meeting.

Woman Charged With Jaywalking, DisorderlyConduct

A woman was charged with jaywalking and disorderly conduct yesterday after she allegedly walked against the red-light signal at Fourteenth and G streets and lunged at a policeman.

The accused pedestrian gave her name as Mildred Datton, of 715 G street. She was being held in Women's Bureau in lieu of $7 collateral for appearance in Traffic Court today.

W. W. Hill, the arresting officer, said he blew his whistle when the woman and two others started to cross G street against the light.

Miss Datton refused to turn back with the others, he charged. When he took her arm, the policeman asserted, the woman punched him. Another policeman, who happed to be nearby, helped Hill to make the arrest.

Not a Rug on the Boat, but the 'Rug Cutters' Did Their Best

Post Staff Photos.

The moon was shining, the steamer Potomac puffing down the river, the Montana Democratic Club cruising, and the temperature slowly dropping from 90. Unaware of most of this was a stanch group called jitterbugs who knew that a prize was offered for the best "rug cutter" among them, but that there wasn't a rug in sight. Janet and Stover Babcock (right) were well in the running for that prize when the temperature was about 80 in the breeze. Three who cheered them on 'til the finish were Virginia Hinson, Peggy Upfold and Violet Read (at left)

Greenberg Stars as Tigers Beat Yanks, 5 to 2

Red Ruffing Hex Killed By Detroit

Suffers First Loss To Bengals Since June Of 1937; Hank Slaps His 20th Home Run

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 1.—Led by big Hank Greenberg, the Detroit Tigers aroused themselves today to beat the world champion Yankees, 5 to 2, and end Charley (the Red) Ruffing's old hex.

Since June 6, 1937, the durable righthander had tamed the Tigers 13 consecutive times and he allowed only 7 hits today compared to an even dozen collected by the Yanks.

But one of the Detroit blows was Greenberg's twentieth home run of the season with two teammates on base in the first inning and these runs proved all the Tigers needed, with Paul Trout and Archie McKain holding tight in the clutches.

Greenberg also doubled and scored on Pinky Higgins' single in the third. Earl Averill doubled and successive outfield flies brought him home for the Tigers' other run in the sixth.

Trout got credit for the victory. He fed George Selkirk a home-run ball in the second inning, Selkirk's eighteenth, and gave up another tally in the eighth on a walk and two singles.

McKain took charge in the ninth with one on and none out and subdued the Yankees, although giving Joe DiMaggio a double to continue the Yankee star's hitting streak through 12 straight games.

ICC Golfer Has Ace Right After 8 At Nat'l Women's

Everett A. Alden, an Interstate Commerce Commission employe, improved his golf game seven strokes between two holes yesterday at National Women's Club.

On the 372-yard fifth, Alden shot an 8, but on the sixth, a 157-yard affair, he slapped a 1-iron shot on the green and it rolled into the cup for an ace. His score for the nine was 41. Ernest Giles was witness to the feat.

Petey Sarron Hurt in Crash; One Is Killed

Former Champion's Injuries Unknown; Wreck Near Birmingham

By the Associated Press

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 1.—Petey Sarron, former world's featherweight boxing champion, was injured and a companion killed in an automobile accident today near Gardendale, 12 miles from here.

SARRON

Sarron, who held the featherweight title from 1936 to 1938, was brought to a hospital here. His head and arms were bruised, but the full extent of his injuries was not immediately determined.

Robert McCain, of Birmingham, was dead when taken from the wreckage of the automobile.

Sarron, now fighting as a lightweight, won the featherweight championship from Freddie Miller, of Cincinnati, at Washington in 1936, and lost it to Henry Armstrong, present titleholder.

Sarron Always A Favorite Here

He was a factor in reviving Washington fight interest by his many battles at Portner's Arena in Alexandria where he fought memorable bouts with Eddie Burl and other featherweight contenders which earned him a shot at Freddie Miller's world title three years ago.

His windmill style of fighting, which bordered on unorthodox tactics, won the little Syrian popularity with Washington fans but caused many fighters in his class to shy from bouts with him.

In winning the world title from Miller at Griffith Stadium during the 1936 Shrine convention, Sarron scored a decisive victory over the champion. He went on tour for a year thereafter under the guidance of Jimmy Irwin, fighting many bouts in South Africa.

In losing his title to Henry Armstrong in New York last year, Sarron was ahead on points until he was knocked out in the fifth round. He blamed his necessity for taking off 5 pounds of weight the day before the fight for his defeat and announced that thereafter he would fight as a lightweight at 136 pounds.

In the event that Armstrong retained his lightweight title against Lew Ambers, Sarron was to meet the colored champion in another match, according to plans he announced in Washington a month ago.

'Dutch' Leonard Will Oppose Kramer Today

Dutch Leonard will seek his eleventh victory of the year today when he goes to the mound against the St. Louis Browns in the second game of the current series.

Manager Fred Haney, of the Browns, has nominated Jack Kramer, early season rookie sensation, as his pitching choice.

Second Baseman Buddy Myer, out of the Nats' line-up for more than a week with a bruised muscle suffered in a slide, is expected to rejoin the Washington infield today.

Ken Chase Is Routed But Nats Win, 7 to 5

Local Club Pounds Kennedy and Lawson for 14 Hits; Giuliani's Triple Featured; Appleton Called In to Save Game

By Shirley Povich.

The Browns won the ninth inning yesterday, but the Nats won the rest of the ball game and achieved a 7-5 victory. But before Pete Appleton rescued the rapidly-swooning Ken Chase and the rapidly-evaporating Washington lead it was a nervous ninth for the Nats inasmuch as the Browns had the tying run nestling on second base with only one out.

Chase, who lost out on a no-hit game in the ninth inning four days ago, all but lost a 7-3 lead in the ninth yesterday. For eight innings he resembled a brilliant pitcher and then he was overcome by his ninth-inning nemesis. Completely fagged, he forced over one run and was knocked from the box.

The first three men to face Chase in the ninth reached base and produced a run. The curly-haired lefthander, who hadn't issued a walk in the first seven innings, passed Chet Laabs to start the ninth and then saw Glenn beat out a hit that Travis was fortunate to reach. Then he pitched a single to Berardino and his lead was whittled to 7-4.

Chase played in luck on his next pitch. It was a line drive by Pinch Hitter Spindell and Buddy Lewis speared it with a larcenous stab. Reprieved for the moment, Chase then proceeded to walk Heffner and Sullivan to force over another run and leave the bases still filled.

Appleton Goes In

That's where Pete Appleton came in. Appleton immediately began to do an excellent job on the Browns. He forced McQuinn to loft to Case on a fly so short that Berardino made no attempt to score from third, and then he disposed of the dangerous Myril Hoag on a meek grounder to Lewis for what was then the greatly cherished last out.

Buddy Lewis and Angelo Giuliani actually won the ball game for the Nats in the first five innings when they delivered damaging blows against Vernon Kennedy and Roxie Lawson, the pair of righthanders formerly employed by the Tigers. With a first-inning two-bagger and a second-inning single, Lewis drove in the Nats first three runs. The next three runs were produced by Giuliani who whacked a triple to center with the bases full in the fifth.

Chase, and Pete Appleton, who didn't go to bat, were the only members of the Nats' cast who failed to partake of the 14-hit assault on Kennedy and Lawson. Buddy Lewis, Taft Wright, Cecil Travis, Jimmy Bloodworth, Mickey Vernon

Gilbert Hunt Is Defeated In Tennis Play

Mako and Guernsey Also Eliminated At Southampton

By the Associated Press

Southampton, N. Y., Aug. 1.—Double-header day at the forty-ninth annual Meadow Club invitation tournament produced four seeded casualties today. Two of them, Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, and Frank Guernsey, of Orlando, Fla., bowed out in the matinee round, while the other pair, Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., and Gil Hunt, of Washington, D. C., succumbed in the nightcap.

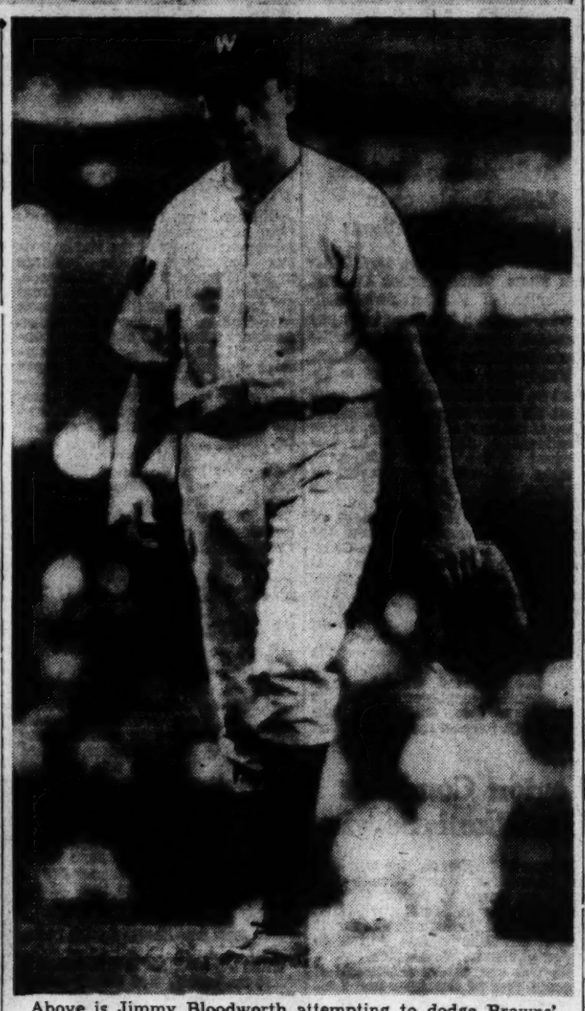
Mako, seeded No. 2, was beaten by Robert Peacock, of Berkeley, Calif., 6—2, 3—6, 6—1, and was followed to the sidelines by Guernsey, No. 7, who yielded to Bob Kamrath, of Austin, 7—5, 3—6, 6—2. As the long day of play neared its end, Cooke, No. 5, fell before Ernest Sutter, of New Orleans, 2—6, 6—2, 6—4, and George Toley, of Los Angeles, conquered Hunt, No. 3, 6—2, 6—0.

Sutter and Toley reached the quarter-final round, and Peacock and Kamrath joined them there later by prevailing over their late afternoon opponents. Peacock took Russell Bobbitt, of Atlanta, 6—4, 6—3, while Kamrath bested John Hope Doeg, of Rumson, N. J., 6—4, 6—4.

Top-seeded Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, one of the three remaining favorites, captured a quarter-final berth, defeating both Carlton Rood, of Brooklyn, 6—4, 6—0, and Gardnar Mulloy, of Miami, 6—3, 7—5. Joe Hunt, of San Francsico, sixth-seeded, turned back Ronald Lubin, of Los Angeles, 6—0, 6—3, and Welby Van Horn, also of Los Angeles, 6—4, 4—6, 6—4.

Henry Prusoff, of Seattle, defeated Bill Murphy, of Chicago, 6—4, 6—4, to gain the round of eight. Eigth-seeded Sid Wood, of New York, advanced at the expense of Ladislav Hecht, of Czecho-Slovakia, 6—3, 6—1.

Wayne Sabin, of Portland, Oreg., defaulted in the morning to Mulloy because the tournament committee would not allow him to wear spikes. He had won the first set, 7—5, and was trailing in the second, 1—3.



Above is Jimmy Bloodworth attempting to dodge Browns' Catcher Glenn on a slide home in the Nats' big second inning yesterday. Umpire Bill Summers called him out and received prolonged heckling from the crowd which claimed Bloodworth slid under the catcher's glove. Below—"No-Hit" Ken Chase dejectedly leaves the mound after three walks in the ninth. He pitched an excellent game until that point.

El Chico Wins First Purse of '39 at Spa

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 1.—El Chico, the tiny, unimpressive-looking colt that became the 1938 juvenile champion with seven successes in as many starts, only to prove the biggest disappointment of this season's 3-year-olds, today won his first purse of the year in the 1-mile Mohegan, an event for 3-year-olds and upward. None of his rivals today had the speed to keep up with the little fellow from William Ziegler, jr.'s barn and he stepped past the wire with a half dozen lengths to spare. He carried a mere 105 pounds.

The son of John P. Grier—La Chica, with Nick Wall again in the saddle, ran the 8 furlongs in 1:37 3-5 and was the first winning choice of the day at odds of 9 to 10.

Mrs. Colin MacLeod's Pernie headed F. J. Buchanan's My Porter for the place. Then came At Play, Bar Fly, Anthology and Handcuff, which refused to break with her field and was left.

The pint-sized Ziegler colt began his 3-year-old campaign by taking a beating from Gilded Knight in a 6-furlong dash at Jamaica. He then suffered crushing setbacks in the Wood Memorial and Kentucky Derby and was put down as strictly a sprinter. Returning to the 6-furlong distance at Belmont Park, El Chico finished second to Golden Voyage in an allowance race. While he won with great ease this afternoon, the former champion, at his best here a year ago when he won the Hopeful and two other races, was a mighty tired looking horse at the end of the 8-furlong journey.

Wall sent the favorite away on top and El Chico kept increasing his lead until he was 10 lengths clear midway of the stretch. Pernie, always nearest in pursuit, fought it out in game fashion with My Porter and barely earned the place. My Porter easily beat the others.

Alice Marble Twice Winner

By the Associated Press

East Hampton, N. Y., Aug. 1.—Alice Marble, of Beverly Hills, Calif., American and Wimbledon champion, made a belated debut in the annual Maidstone Club invitation tournament today, and polished off two opponents in a hurry. First she defeated Virginia Nash, of West Hampton, N. Y., 6—1, 6—1, and then blanked Mary L. Johnston, of Hollywood.

Second-seeded Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Brookline, Mass., another late comer, also scored two conquests, one over Mrs. Gilda M. Gross, of Berkeley, Calif., 6—0, 6—1, and the other over Mrs. Virginia Rice Johnson, of Chestnut Hill, Mass., 6—1, 6—4. Both Mrs. Fabyan and Miss Marble gained the quarter-final round.

Helen Jacobs, of Berkeley, seeded third, played only one match to reach the bracket of eight, beating Millicent Hirsh, of New York, 6—4, 6—0. Another quarter-finalist is fourth-ranked Dorothy Workman, of Los Angeles, who turned back Marta Barnett, of Coral Gables, Fla., 7—5, 7—5.

Nip and Tuck at the Wire in Saratoga Claiming Race

Jockey F. A. Smith was forced to push his mount, Jim's Niece, to the limit yesterday at Saratoga to win the second race but he got over the line just in time. Jim's Niece, paying 8 to 1, beat out Bellfinger and Dunnamany

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

A baseball figure who never threw a baseball or swung a bat died yesterday in New York. Al Munro Elias never wore a uniform, but he was as much a part of the game for most of his life as the third strike.

"Copyright, Al Munro Elias," you've seen it a thousand times if you are a reader of the sports pages. It's the line appended to the tables of baseball averages and it was Elias who made a science of baseball figures, preparing the up-to-the-minute digits for consumption by baseball fans throughout the land.

POVICH

He was 67 years old when he died, an olive-complexioned, seam-lined little gentleman who 12 years before had lost one leg in an automobile accident. It was as a youth in Charleston, S. C., that he was impressed with the fact that he had the mind of a lightning calculator with the figures and he soon was to make a business of it.

He wasn't content with supplying statistics merely to leagues and clubowners for their own perusal. He hiked around the country peddling his averages to newspapers which were alive to the growing demand for baseball facts. When large news services like the Associated Press and United Press subscribed to the Elias Bureau, his national distribution of his averages was secure.

For more than 20 years he has been the official statistician-in-waiting to the American League and a score of minor leagues, but that is not his chief claim to fame, nor is the fact that he was, at death, editor of "The Little Red Book," the amazing compendium of baseball averages since the eighties. Elias' greatest contribution was neither of these.

Invented 'Five Leading Hitters'

It was the little table of figures which he named "The Five Leading Hitters." It was a new departure in baseball statistics, giving newspapers and fans up-to-the-minute data day by day on the players who led the two big leagues at bat. "The Five Leading Hitters" has been the baseball bible of both fans and players who want a quick look at who may be leading the big leagues at bat.

For the baseball writers in the press boxes, little Mr. Elias and his brother Walter, treasurer of the firm, were heaven-sent. Did Carl Hubbell set a record when he struck out five successive hitters in the All-Star game of 1933 at the Polo Grounds? Ask Al Munro Elias, who was certain to be in the press box even as he had been in the press box of every world series since 1903.

Who won the American League batting championship in 1928 when Goose Goslin, of the Nats, and Heinie Manush, of the Tigers, came down to the wire on the last day only a fraction of a point apart. It wasn't much use to ask the league president or other league officials. Only Al Munro Elias could say with any authority which was the winner.

There'll be baseball averages forevermore, of course. There will be both demand and supply. They won't be copyrighted by Al Munro Elias, though, because a pioneer has passed on.

Because Bucky Walters, a mediocre third baseman with the Red Sox, transformed himself into a winning pitcher for the Phils and Reds, it was only natural that the transition would be attempted by others. Now being groomed as a pitcher by the Reds is Budy Hafey, who formerly worked at the outfielding trade.

But despite Walters' enormous success as a pitcher, precedent is almost solidly against such a conversion. Pitchers have blossomed as great outfielders and brilliant infielders—Tris Speaker, Babe Ruth, Sam Rice, Goose Goslin and Red Lucas, to name a few—but the theory has hardly been found workable in reverse.

The Case of Pitcher Kress

The fact is that pitching is more of an exact science than any other trade on the diamond. A potent bat can help an infielder or an outfielder to get by nicely if he is only an average performer on the defense, but pitching calls for niceties of skill. A strong arm is no guarantee that a man will be a good pitcher.

Manager Bucky Harris tried it with Red Kress a few years back. Kress came out of the infield in a game at Yankee Stadium to toe a big league rubber for the first time in his life and was a sensational success. He struck out the first three men to face him.

But it wasn't lasting success. Kress fanned three Yankees not because he was a pitcher but because he was an infielder trying to pitch. They had fright written all over their faces as they stepped to bat, wondering whether they were going to be hit on the head or in the groin by what might be one of Kress' wild pitches. They were swinging in self defense.

When they attuned themselves to Kress' pitching, he was a flop despite his terrific speed. He couldn't get the ball over the plate and when he did they lambasted it. After his second appearance, Kress abandoned the idea, just as most anybody who is not a pitcher by trade would feel constrained to give up.

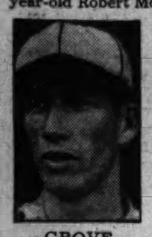
Veteran Lefty Grove Beats Bob Feller as Bosox Win, 7-5

Bob Doerr's Two Homers Decide Game

Cleans Sacks With Four-Ply Clout to Left; Manager Vitt Chased by Umpire

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Aug. 1.—Thanks to Bobby Doerr's grand-slam homer—his second round tripper of the day—39-year-old Robert Moses Grove gained a 7 to 5 pitching verdict over 20-year-old Bob Feller today as the Boston Red Sox took the series opener from Cleveland.



GROVE

Doerr already had contributed a homer with no one on in the first inning when he stepped to the plate in the fifth after Joe Vosmik doubled and Desautels and Grove were walked.

Two men were out and Cleveland was leading, 3 to 1, when Doerr smashed the first pitch into the leftfield screen. Cleveland historians said it was the first time in two years, when Joe DiMaggio, of the New York Yankees, turned the trick, that any player had clipped Feller for two homers in one game.

Umpire-in-Chief Cal Hubbard ejected Vitt at the end of the fifth when the Cleveland manager persisted in protesting a strike called upon Bruce Campbell earlier in the inning. Campbell and Harry Eisenstat also joined Vitt on the sidelines.

In the eighth Umpire Eddie Rommel banished Second Baseman Odell Hale for protesting a decision in which Rommel called Ted Williams safe on a steal of second. With Hale out, the Indians shifted Oscar Grimes from first to second and Luke Sewell, one of the game's great catchers, took up a new position at first base.

Dodger Rally Turns Back Pirates, 5-3

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Aug. 1.—Fat Freddy Fitzsimmons, who hadn't won a game since beating Pittsburgh in mid-July, pitched the Brooklyn Dodgers to a 5-to-3 victory over the Pirates today although having to call for help from Vito Tamulis.

The Dodgers came from behind in the fifth with a three-run uprising on two singles, a double by Harry Lavagetto and a triple by Dixie Walker. Walker also brought in a run in the first with a three-bagger and hit a single.

Elbie Fletcher sent the Pirates in front in the first with a two-run triple, then doubled and scored in the sixth but went down on called strikes with the tying run on base in the eighth.

Biggest Man in Baseball—His Name Is Gee

The biggest man in big league ball—that's the title claimed for the youngster shown above emulating a railroad semaphore by the Pittsburgh Pirates. The large fellow is John A. Gee, jr., 23-year-old southpaw pitcher, whom the Pirates claim they obtained from the International League Syracuse club by outbidding five major league clubs—including the Washington Nationals. John is a 6-foot-9 specimen and weighs 215 pounds. He joined Syracuse direct from the University of Michigan in 1937, has won 16 games and lost 4

Suburban Club Sets Tourney For Amateurs

Play Slated August 25 On Pikesville Course; Has Double Purpose

With District pros busy tuning their games for next week's Maryland Open championship at Hillendale, local amateurs were given an incentive to keep in top shape when Nathan Kaufman, jr., announced another Suburban Club invitation tournament for the Pikesville course August 25-26-27.

Entry in the event will be by invitation only, but Kaufman indicated that virtually every one of the city's golfers would receive an invitation, and any others would be taken care of by the golf committee chairman.

The tournament will have the purpose of also serving as a warm-up for the National Amateur qualifying rounds August 29 at Five Farms. Several out-of-town stars who will attempt to qualify at Five Farms will receive invitations.

Some 50 local amateurs are expected to compete in the event, which will start Friday, August 25, with a qualifying round, with match play on Saturday and Sunday. Five sixteens will qualify. The Suburban course is in tiptop shape at present.

The Maryland Open championship over Charley Betschler's Hillendale layout on Tuesday, August 8, will find Wiffy Cox, Congressional mentor, the only local absentee in the starting field of the 36-hold medal-play event.

A previous engagement in New York will probably keep Cox from playing, but otherwise the field will be led by Al Houghton, the four-time champion and recent winner of the Bedford Open. Other former champions from here include Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam, and Gene Larkin, Woodmont.

Topping the host city entries will be Andy Gibson, the defending champion from Bonnie View, and Ralph Beach, and Betschler, former titleholders.

Houghton, who won the title three years running and last year finished third after leading at the halfway mark, Leo Walper, Cliff Spencer and several others from here are expected to go from Hillendale to Pittsburgh and the $10,000 Dapper Dan Open, starting August 10 and continuing through the 13th.

Fla. Yachts Steal Show

By the Associated Press

Cambridge, Md., Aug. 1.—A swarm of small sail boats skipped before a 12-mile northwest breeze today racing for cups and honors in the Cambridge Yacht Club regatta.

Commodore Taver Bayly of the Clearwater (Fla.) Yacht Club and head of the International Snipe Racing Association, saw snipe entries from his club win most of the trophies in this class.

Theodore Kaminsky, of Clearwater, captured first place, and Don Corkran, also of Clearwater, took second in both events. Third place went to Robert Gintling, of Sparrows Point.

S. L. Harrison, Washington, D. C. skipped, sailed his moth class boat, Bilge Water, to third place in the section behind Norfolk's Bill Cos and St. Michaels' James Caulk.

Brewers-Motors Argue; Game Ends

An argument that caused the calling of the game after the sixth inning, and the threat of a protest to the league president, marked Heurich Brewers' Industrial League game with Russell Motors yesterday, but the Beermen were nevertheless credited with a 10-to-7 victory. The result improved their hold on first place.

Russell was in the midst of a rally when the dispute came up. It concerned whether a man had touched third or not. The umpire said he hadn't and Russell players said he had.

Johnny Mize Paces Attack With Two Of Three-Base Raps

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 1.—The Cardinals were in a tripling mood today, getting four three-base hits in defeating the Boston Bees, 4 to 3, for Curt Davis' fourteenth victory.

Johnny Mize got two of the long hits, driving in a run each time. Pepper Martin tripled behind Davis' double and scored himself on an error. The fourth Cardinal three-bagger, by Stuart Martin, was wasted.

To offset these extra-base wallops, the Bees had a triple by Rabbit Warstler and doubles by Debs Garms and Tony Cuccinello in their collection of 12 hits. The Cardinals got only eight hits, all off Starting Pitcher Danny MacFayden.

O'Rourke Steals Midget Auto Race Show From Russo, Nalon

Paul Russo and Duke Nalon, veteran Chicago pilots, dominated the midget auto racing program last night at the Capitol Speedway, but Cowboy O'Rourke, another Chicagoan, stole the show by fighting his rebellious, smelly "iron jitterbug" trough a field of eight other starters to win the 15-lap consolation race.

O'Rourke, starting in eighth position, drove his snarling Elto special to the front, scraping bumpers with skidding opponents on the way, and then bathed the field in a cloud of caster oil fumes from his exhaust pipe as he opened up to win the 3¾-mile semifinal in 4:47.60 before around 10,000 spectators.

Harry Harper, driving a V-8, fought hub cap to hub cap with O'Rourke the last mile and a quarter but could not overtake the outboard, which bounded crazily over the quarter-mile oval as though it would jump the guard rail any minute.

Russo took the third and sixth races easily in an Offenhauser and duplicated his feats in the 25-lap feature, winning handily in 7:12.17. Russo and Nalon took the lead early in the feature event and their closest threat was O'Rourke, who finished third about a quarter of a mile behind. Eighteen drivers took part in the seven races. Larry French Beats Phillies For Cubs, 6-2

Comes Out of Doghouse To Relieve Dean in 3d; Owner Wrigley Watches

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 1.—Larry French, the veteran southpaw who had asked Owner Phil Wrigley to do something about his case of bench-riding, got his chance today and pitched the Chicago Cubs to a 6-to-2 victory over the Philadelphia Phils in their series opener.

Dizzy Dean started but was taken out at the end of the third inning when he complained of soreness in his right arm just below the shoulder. He had allowed one run and two hits to that point.

In the 'Doghouse.'

French, who told Wrigley he was in Manager Gabby Hartnett's "doghouse" because he had expressed a preference for Gus Mancuso as a catcher, set the Phils down in the last six innings with six hits and one run. It was his seventh victory as against five losses.

Mancuso was French's catcher today, the veteran receiver having started the game with Dean. Before the game Hartnett had said he planned to rest for a few days and leave the catching to Mancuso.

Prothro Banished

The Cubs collected 11 hits off two Philly hurlers, including a home run by Outfielder Bill Nicholson, former Chattanooga Southern Association player making his National League debut.

Umpire Dick Campbell banished the Phils' manager, Doc Prothro, from the game in the fifth for protesting a decision.

Bud Hafey's Pitching Pleasing in Practice

Cincinnati, Aug. 1 (AP).—Although the rumor that Lew Riggs was being turned into a pitcher proved unfounded, Coach Jimmy Wilson of the Reds admitted today that he was working on Bud Hafey, an outfielder recently acquired from Knoxville of the Southern Association.

Hafey has been pitching in batting practice and Wilson said he had a good fast ball and possibilities.

Giants Halt Reds' Streak at 10 Games

Terrymen Score a 5-4 Victory in 10 Innings Over Cincinnati; Danning Singles Jurges Home in Extra Inning to Win

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Aug. 1.—The reviving New York Giants, the only club holding an edge for the season over Cincinnati's National League leaders, nosed out a 5-to-4 ten-inning victory today to end the Reds' winning streak of ten games.

Harry Danning singled Bill Jurges home from second in the tenth for the winning run after he had tripled two other tallies across in the midst of a four-run rally in the sixth.

Paul Derringer, dean of the Cincinnati pitching corps, went the route in absorbing his fifth defeat against 14 triumphs. He blew a three-run lead when the Giants staged their six-hit spree in the sixth, but otherwise was invincible until the tenth.

JURGES

In New York's big inning, Burgess Whitehead beat out a bunt, but was erased in a double play. Then Joe Moore and Jurges singled, Danning tripled, Mel Ott walked, Zeke Bonura singled Danning home and Frank Demaree brought in Ott with a Texas Leaguer.

Rookie Manny Salvo, who had beaten the Reds twice, was removed for a pinch-hiter during this rally and Cliff Melton took credit for the victory after yielding a home run to Wally Berger to knot the score in the last of the sixth.

Cincinnati tallied in the third on a single, a passed ball and a single by Bill Werber, and in the fourth scored twice on a walk to Berger, a double by Tony Bongiovanni and a single by Billy Myers.

California Doctor Urges Glasses For Better Batting

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Aug. 1.—Ballplayers instead of the oft-maligned umpire may be the ones who need glasses, Dr. Clement Joynt, of Los Angeles, told the convention of the American Progressive Chiropractic Association.

"Many ball players probably could increase their batting and fielding averages if they wore glasses," he said.

"I believe that when great ball players fall into a 'slump' that properly fitted glasses would be of material benefit."

Fighting in Front Of Grandstand Draws Penalty; Waugh Pop Establishes Record

Special Dispatch to The Post

Bel Air, Md., Aug. 1.—The J. E. Wells Purse, mile feature, saw M. R. Waugh's Waugh Pop establish a new record of 1:39 3-5 in winning from nine opponents. He paid $23.80.

Lou Machado, leading winning rider at the meeting, snugged Waugh Pop for a half. Once given his head, Waugh Pop came fast to win as his rider pleased. Mrs. Janon Fisher, jr.'s Wahcoo raced to second money ahead of M. B. Goss' War Rumor.

A $50 fine, suspension for the remainder of the meeting and their case referred to the Maryland Racing Commission was plastered on Jockeys C. Kirk, of Silver Spring, Md., and Patsy Grant for fighting in front of the grandstand following the running of the second race. Grant rode Reigh Tetrarch, with Kirk handling Bud's Virmar.

A new 2-mile record of 4:18 2-5 was posted when John Bosley's Le Passadou came from far back in the final half to land the Patapsco Steeplechase, secondary feature.

Arthur Hullcoat's Welsh Lad established a new seven-eighths record of 1:26 3-5 in winning the seventh. It was the third record hung up today.

GRAND WALTZ, away well and having good speed, assumed command under strong pressure, opened up a wide lead midway of the homestretch when MOTHER CAREY swung extremely wide, but barely lasted long enough while tiring. MOTHER CAREY was a stout factor early, challenged strongly on the turn, bolted to the outside entering the homestretch, but continued strongly and just missed. RED WRACK raced well placed and finished willingly. CAMOLA showed a good effort.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EVER GRAND, $5.00, $3.20, $2.90; GRACEY, $4.90, $4.00; NANCY SWIFT, $5.70.

EVER GRAND, going in his best form, sprinted to the front early, moved clear gradually, was shaken up lightly in the stretch drive and drew out steadily. GRACEY worked her way forward on the last half mile and came willingly pressing the close. NANCY SWIFT, lacking early speed, finished with good courage in the late stages. JIMMY S. raced forwardly all the way and had no excuses.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LE PASSADOU, $28.20, $8.10, $4.40; JACAMAR, $3.20, $3.30; GOLD SWEEPER, $3.70.

LE PASSADOU, under steadying restraint for the first mile, moved up fast nearing the twelfth fence, went to the front readily but had to be vigorously ridden approaching the finish to withstand JACAMAR. The latter saved a great deal of ground at all the fences while going close to the pacemaker, moved to the front at the twelfth fence, continued to save ground and came again at the close after being overhauled. GOLD SWEEPER set a good pace from start, lost ground all the way, then outstayed DRILLMASTER nearing the finish. DRILLMASTER entered a forward position at the twelfth jump, but could not reach the leaders and was overconfidently handled to lose third when he was eased.

Baering Down

The New Deal took so much turf that nobody could tell which is the divot and which is the golf course.

Now we seem to be back on the fairway and all because the Senate decided that party lines do not a prison make nor stone post-offices a cage.

Business is picking up. After seven years it is nice to hear that prosperity is no longer a jest around the corner.

Wash. Gas Reports Loss In Earnings

Deficit Is $44,416 for June as Against Net Of $20,545 a Year Ago

The monthly report of the Washington Gas Light Co., filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission, shows operating revenues of $320,083 for June, compared with $534,915 for June a year ago, a decrease of $14,832 as a result of a smaller volume of gas sales.

Operating expenses, including taxes and uncollectable bills, amounted to $510,100 for the month, compared with $443,144 for June, 1938, an increase of $66,956, principally due to the new District of Columbia corporate income tax covering the estimated tax liabilities for the entire first half of the year.

Non-operating revenues amounted to $15,832, or $6,498 more than June a year ago. Interest and amortization was $70,231 for June this year, compared with $80,560 for June last year, a decrease effected by the bond refinancing last November.

The final balance for the month was a deficit of $44,416, compared with net income of $20,545 in June, 1938. The net income for the first six months of 1939 amounted to $909,362, compared with $729,080 for the same period last year, an increase of $180,262.

There were 154,[illegible] meters in service as June 30, 1939, a gain of 6,689 meters over the same date last year.

Out of the earnings for the fiscal year, $54,000 was paid as dividends to the investing members and $5,250 transferred to the surplus account.

In addition to Mr. Sherwood other officers are: William S. Torbett, vice president and counsel; Henry C. Atlhoff, vice president; Schuyler S. Symons, secretary; Dr. Allen E. Cowles, assistant secretary; James H. Payne, treasurer, and Hazel R. Engelbrecht, assistant treasurer. The board of directors include the officers and Julian F. Belfield, R. John Boehs, N. T. July Copper Sales At Record High

New York, Aug. 1 (AP).—July sales of copper to consumers in the United States at 182,578 tons broke all monthly records of the industry, trade resources reported today. The previous peak was 180,052 tons in October, 1936.

The month's sales, it was pointed out, were exclusive of about 25,000 tons sold to France from home-mined supplies. The big buying wave by domestic cosumers, after months of slack demand, was touched off by news of large export orders, mostly from France, for armament needs and industrial expansion in Europe.

SEC Registrations Led by Utilities During First Half

With securities registered under the Securities Act of 1933 amounting to $275,409,000 for June, 1939, the total of registrations for the first six months of 1939 amounted to $890,922,000, according to an analysis issued yesterday by the research and statistics section of the Trading and Exchange Division. Of the gross amount of securities which became registered in June, 1939, $252,910,000 was proposed for sale by issuers. This amount represented an increase over the $31,228,000 shown for May, 1939, and was somewhat in excess of the $213,843,000 shown for June, 1938.

Although the $735,585,000 in the first six months of 1939 was below the $1,316,194,000 total shown for the final six months of 1938, a fairly large increase was shown over the comparable total of $633,312,000 recorded for the first six months of 1938.

Approximately one-half of securities proposed for sale by issuers for the first six months of 1939 represented issues of electric and gas utility companies, which accounted for $358,928,000, or 48.8 per cent of the total. Manufacturing companies with $269,576,000, or 36.6 per cent of the total, were next in importance. Securities of financial and investment companies amounted to $65,852,000, or 9.0 per cent of the total. These three industry groups accounted for all but about five per cent of the total.

Georgia Tobacco Prices Decline

Atlanta, Aug. 1 (AP).—Tobacco sales totaled $3,985,575.62 at Georgia's 15 market centers last week, averaging 14.75 cents for 27,024,786 pounds.

The official figures on 64 warehouses in the State, compiled today by the State Department of Agriculture, covered four days of the 1939 auction season.

They compared with the two days of sales in the first week last year, when 14,097,350 pounds sold for $3,771,482.55 at an average of 26.75 cents.

Foundation Reports $158,299,788 Assets

New York, Aug. 1 (AP).—The Rockefeller Foundation's annual report showed today that its holdings were listed at a ledger value of $158,299,788, as of last December 31, compared with $172,073,540 at the end of 1937, the decrease resulting chiefly from the sale, redemption and exchange of $13,117,414 in bonds.

Bonds were carried at $54,959,786, compared with $67,450,287, and stocks at $103,339,992, against $104,623,253. Standard Oil stock holdings increased 16,115 shares last year as a result of a stock dividend, bringing the total value to $36,962,522.

Wheat Prices Decline With Belt Rainfall

Reverses Rising Trend and Closes Off 1 to 1⅜ Cents

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—Wheat prices fell 1 to 1⅜ cents a bushel today and closed near the session's low marks.

Rain and cooler weather in the Canadian and U. S. spring wheat belts, moderate selling pressure and slow demand following six consecutive days of rising prices combined to bring about the downturn. Offerings decreased at the extreme setback, but the market was unable to develop much rallying power. Corn declined with wheat.

Spring wheat belt markets led the decline, both Winnipeg and Minneapolis showing losses of 1⅜ cents. December contracts here fell to 64⅝, down 1⅜ from the previous close. December was off 1¼ at 65¼, and May 1⅜ at 65¾.

Wheat here closed ¾@1¼ off; September, 64⅞@64¾; December, 65⅝@65⅝; corn, ⅜@1 cent off; September, 41⅞@41¾; December, 42¼@42⅛; oats, ¼@½ off; soybeans unchanged to ⅜ off; rye, ⅜ off, and lard, 3 to 5 cents lower.

424,000 More Employed in June, Board Reports

New York, Aug. 1 (AP).—A gradual back-to-work march in private industry reduced unemployment in the United States by about 424,000 in June, the National Industrial Conference Board estimated today.

The board, a private research organization, said approximately 1,142,000 have gone out of the jobless tabulation since February. Its latest unemployed estimate was 9,552,000, the lowest since December, 1937, compared with 10,959,000 in June, 1938.

At the depression peak in March, 1933, the board's figure was up to 14,706,000. The 1929 average was 469,000. The total had been cut to 5,651,000 in September, 1937, on the verge of the severe autumn collapse in production that year.

The latest estimate showed 18 out of every hundred available workers jobless compared with less than one out of every hundred in 1929. The return of 160,000 bituminous miners to work in the coal fields was the largest source of gain in June, the board noted, but all major branches of industry contributed. The increase in manufacturing employment, it said, was contrary to expectations for the season.

Stock Prices Fluctuate Narrowly In Sluggish Trading; Loft Activity Continues; Bonds Higher and Active

New York, Aug. 1.—Fractional changes predominated in a stock market today that was characterized by fluctuations which were insufficient to break the list out of the narrow range which it has held for more than a week. Judged by the composite average, there was a minor advance of .09 point, with closing prices not far from the best. Trading was relatively dull, only 575,030 shares changing hands. Oils were under pressure and the metals didn't do too well.

Utilities held their recent gains and there was support for miscellaneous manufacturing stocks, with a number of the more inactive preferreds putting in an appearance at higher levels.

Loft Most Active

Loft continued to be the most active stock but it lost a fraction when the meeting of the Pepsi-Cola board was held and no melon was cut. The parent company issued an earning statement which was as poor as was anticipated, and this raised the question as to just what is going on in this stock, for Loft has been the most active issue on virtually every day of recent weeks. The assumption that Loft has been carrying along a number of stores which are not paying their way, and that these are to be dropped. When this internal reorganization takes place, the earning statement should make more pleasant reading for those who have bid this spectacular favorite up so many points in the last few months. Certainly its earnings to date are not the kind to justify a private bull market. The recent Pepsi-Cola report justified bullish expectations and it may be the earnings of this profitable subsidiary that has led along the bull following.

Other active stocks in today's market held within a narrow range. Steel and Bethlehem were off slightly. There was not much change in General Motors and Chrysler was up a fraction; the feeling being in Wall Street that the strike will be broken.

Market Sentiment Good

While the market has not made progress in the last week or ten days, it is noticeable that sentiment in the financial district holds to the constructive side. This is due almost entirely to the turn of events in Washington, where the progress, or lack of progress, of the President's spend-lend bill has reflected a complete turnabout from the psychology which seized upon the legislative branch of the Government in Mr. Roosevelt's early years in office.

Satisfaction in Bill Defeat

With the bill cut to shreds by the Senate and being defeated by the House, there is more solid satisfaction for those who know you can't spend yourself rich than they have enjoyed for the last six years or more. Even if a remnant of the bill should have become law in the closing days of Congress, the victory would have been won by the saner element in Congress. The theory of borrowing to spend, using credit which is implemented by forcing Government bonds into the portfolios of private banks, and looking to such spending as a creator of wealth, has at long last been accorded its correct back seat in the economic thinking of the Nation's law makers. The bill has now been emasculated into just another farm aid measure and bears no resemblance to the original proposal of the President. And among its supporters there is an unmistakable realization that any money so spent will be added to the national debt, no matter what claims are made that it will be spent outside the budget.

Business News Slow

Business news reflects some slowing down. The drop in steel operations is due in large measure to the slowing of business in the automotive industry caused by the strikes. Heavy engineering construction awards for July, reported today, showed a weekly average 14 per cent below that of June and 19 per cent below a year ago. Private volume, however, was only 4 per cent below a year ago, the difference being accounted for by a sharp falling off in public contracts.

Bond Trading Active

Bond prices staged a moderate advance today after a slow and uncertain start. The index of 30 bonds placed the average advance for the domestic corporate list at 0.14 point, with the 10 higher grade rails by far the strongest department of the list. The volume of dealings, however, remained small.

United States Government obligations were irregular at closing time on the Stock Exchange, with losses predominating. The XXX in the late over-the-counter market Treasury bonds callable in 1946 or later were 1-32 to 2-32 of a point lower. The nearby issues were steady.

Brooklyn Gas Extended

Brooklyn Union Gas issues, whose strength has been a feature of the market recently, extended their advance today. The debenture 5s of 1950 rose 1⅛ points to a new high for the year at 98⅝, the refunding 6s of 1947 moved up 1 point to 114¾, also a new high, and the refunding 5s of 1957 were up ¾ point. Atchison Adjustment 4s of 1995 advanced 2 points, but a number of second grade issues were given to weakness.

In the foreign list, Colombian issues were fractionally higher. Uruguay 8s of 1946 rose 9 points on the sale of one bond.

Cleveland, Aug. 1.—Thirteen leading steel producers, representing 85.3 per cent of the country's total ingot capacity, reported aggregate net earnings of $21,109,152 for the first six months this year, according to the magazine Steel. Although meager, first half income compares favorably with the figures for comparable period last year when the identical companies reported a $12,426,876 net deficit.

Second quarter earnings, $12,199,409, were nearly 25 per cent better than those for the first three months this year, despite a lower operating rate in the June period. First quarter operations, resulting in $9,852,417 net profit, averaged 54.64 per cent of capacity. Second quarter operations averaged 50.86 per cent of capacity.

Continuing at record levels, aeronautical exports amounted to $38,247,054 in the first five months this year, according to the magazine report. This was 31 per cent ahead of the corresponding period of 1938. Shipments are expected to show further gains during the remainder of the year as builders speed up deliveries on foreign military bookings.

Licenses were granted in June for shipment to France of $13,000,000 worth of airplane engines according to the munitions control board. Delivery of 215 attack bombers to the French air ministry will be begun immediately by one of the larger plane builders. France is currently America's best plane customer.

Favorites Win As Net League Play Advances

Misses Decker and Bransford Head March of Winners

The two top-seeded players in the Women's Tennis League tournament at Sixteenth Street Courts—Charlotte Decker and Joan Bransford, winner and runner-up last year—came through their matches yesterday. Charlotte defeated her quarter final opponent, Edith McCullock, by an easy 6—3, 6—2 count to enter the round of four with two other players. Joan, one match behind the rest of the field, entered the quarters with a hard-earned 6—8, 6—2, 6—4 victory over Barbara Conard.

Other semi-finalists as a result of yesterday's matches were Marion Cunningham and Sally Whipple. The latter had little trouble with Eleanor Fishburn's volleys and won almost as she pleased, 6—3, 6—3.

Miss Cunningham was a near-victim of an upset when she dropped her first game to Dorette Miller, 5—7. Gradually she solved her foe's style, however, and won the next two sets by scores of 6—3, 6—2.

Misses Decker and Cunningham hung up their second triumphs of the day when they combined in the doubles for a 6—4, 6—4 win over Bishop and Zettlemeier.

Complete results:

Singles—Bransford defeated Conard, 6—8, 6—2, 6—4; Cunningham defeated Miller, 5—7, 6—3, 6—2; Decker defeated McCullock, 6—3, 6—2; Whipple defeated Fishburn, 6—3, 6—3.

Doubles—Voith-Levy defeated Gray-Towers, 6—3, 6—3; Decker-Cunningham defeated Bishop-Zettlemeier, 6—4, 6—4.

Consolations—Graham defeated Espey, 6—0, 6—1; Gray defeated Pope, 0—8, 7—5, 6—3; Miller defeated Rockwell, 5—7, 6—3; Shields defeated McCandlish, 6—2, 6—0; Klots defeated Pardisky, by default; Smith defeated Peebles, 6—2, 6—0.

Today's schedule:

4 p. m. (doubles)—Decker-Cunningham vs. Whipple-Miller. (Consolation singles) Rhett vs. Klots.

Jasper Post Trounces, 12-4, Fort Stevens

Sergt. Jasper Post, whose American Legion junior nine won the championship of the city last year and participated in the all-Eastern playoffs, improved its chances of a second straight crown yesterday on the South Ellipse. It trounced Fort Stevens Post, 12-4, in the first of a three-game playoff for the league title. The next will be Friday at 4:45 p. m.

Though the losers rapped out 11 hits off Jasper's Bill Fischer, the young righthander had little trouble in the pinches. He struck out nine men, while his battery mate, Harry Martin, another Central High star, provided most of the plate punch with a home run, triple and double in six times up.

Sopwith's Protest Vanderbilt Fouled Him Is Upheld

By the Associated Press

Cowes, England, Aug. 1.—T. O. M. Sopwith's protest against Harold S. Vanderbilt's 12-meter yacht, Vim, in yesterday's 27-mile race, was upheld again today by the sailing committee of the Royal Yacht Club, which awarded the victory to Sopwith last night after the American yacht apparently had won by a wide margin.

The committee remained divided, but a majority supported Sopwith's contention that his Tomahawk was fouled by Vim at the starting line. The committee deliberated three hours last night before reaching a decision between the two former America's Cup rivals.

Playground Swimmers Enter Final Round

Takoma, McKinley, Anacostia, East Potomac, Rosendale, Banneker and Francis Represented In Public Aquatic Championship

The waters of seven Department of Playgrounds public swimming pools were churned into a froth yesterday as hundreds of aspiring boy swimmers took part in the preliminaries to the District of Columbia recreation Department's annual tank meet. Takoma, McKinley, Anacostia, East Potomac, Rosedale, Banneker and Francis pools were busy, but Georgetown will run off its preliminaries today.

First, second and third place finishers in the various events qualify for the finals, which will be held at McKinley pool a week from today. Colored lads who placed in the preliminaries at Banneker and Francis will participate in the finals August 9 at Banneker.

Besides the boys activity at Georgetown today, girls of 64 playgrounds, almost 1,000 strong, will start their competition which lasts until Friday. Classes are divided into four sections, with girls from 10 to 17 years being eligible. Various races besides actual swimming will be included in the program.

Chase Routed But Nats Beat Browns, 7 to 5

St. Louis' Attack Is Stemmed; Pete Appleton Holds Foes

Lawson Is Routed

Lawson lasted only four innings. His first act of the game was to walk Case and Lewis promptly drove in a run with a two-bagger to left. In the next inning the Nats' lead burgeoned to 3-0 after Bloodworth rapped a two-bagger to the rightfield wall and was sacrificed to second by Vernon. Giuliani was purposely passed and Kennedy was helped out of difficulty by Umpire Summers who said that Bloodworth was out at the plate when ne tried to score on Chase's grounder to McQuinn.

But with two out, Case drew a walk and Lewis nudged a pair of runs across the plate with a well-tagged single to right.

Giuliani fired the big gun in the fifth. Singles by West and Wright drove Kennedy from the box before a man was retired, and Relief Pitcher Lawson immediately found himself in a predicament when Glenn made a tardy throw to second on Travis' bunt, leaving the bases filled. It appeared that Lawson might escape damage when West was forced at the plate on Bloodworth's grounder to Clift and Vernon popped out, but along came Giuliani with his line-drive triple to center and three runs clattered home.

Travis Scores a Run

Travis drove in the Nats' seventh run when, after Case and Wright had singled in the sixth, he drove a two-bagger off the outstretched glove of First Baseman McQuinn.

For six innings Chase resembled closely the pitcher who shut out the Tigers last week. He was pitching five-hit ball and allowing only one fun. In the third Glenn and Berardino singled and Kennedy produced a run with a long fly. In the seventh, a pair of errors by Mickey Vernon and Jimmy Bloodworth helped the Browns to score two runs, and in the ninth the rapidly-tiring Chase willingly surrendered the job to Appleton.

Man of the Month

By Walter Johnson.

(Following each game by The Washington Club, Walter Johnson distributes among the Nats ten points of merit, based on their performances for the day. At the end of each month, the Washington player boasting the greatest number of points is designated as the Nats' "Man of the Month" and receives a trophy from The Washington Post.)

Buddy Lewis, June's Man of the Month among the Nats, took the lead in the contest for August when he starred at bat yesterday in the 7-5 victory over the Browns. Points were distributed as follows:

To Lewis, four points, because he drove in the Nats' first three runs with a first-inning two-bagger and a second-inning single.

To Pete Appleton, two points, because as a relief pitcher in the ninth with the bases full, one out and the tying run on second, he saved the game by retiring the next two batters on easy chances.

To Ken Chase, one point, because he pitched brilliant ball until knocked out of the box in the ninth. The totals:

Buddy Lewis	4	Pete Appleton	2
Angelo Giuliani	3	Ken Chase	1

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

We forget which of the contract experts first said: "A grand-slam bid and made is worth two rubbers; a small-slam bid and made is worth one rubber." This probably is excellent advice, but in many cases it takes two or three rubbers to bid a slam.

Today's Hand

Neither Side Vulnerable
EAST DEALER

NORTH: ♠ 7 6 4 ♡ J 10 8 5 3 ◇ K 10 7 5 3 ♣ None
WEST: ♠ 9 5 3 2 ♡ Q 7 6 4 2 ◇ 9 6 2 ♣ 8
EAST: ♠ A K Q J 10 ♡ A K 9 ◇ J 8 ♣ Q 5 4
SOUTH: ♠ 8 ♡ None ◇ A Q 4 ♣ A K J 10 9 7 6 3 2

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	Dble.	Pass	2 ◇
2 ♠	6 ♣	Pass	Pass
Dble.	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 9 ♠.

C. M. O. bid an unlucky slam in which he found three of the four trumps against him in one hand. He blames himself for bidding badly and asks what was wrong. The cards and the bidding are shown in today's box. Here is C. M. O.'s letter:

"A few evenings ago four ordinary players had a very interesting hand of bridge. I sat South and the bid was opened by East. After one round of bidding, knowing my partner to be timid, I jumped to six clubs. East doubled.

"West led the spade nine; East played the king and continued with the ace which South trumped. I took two rounds of trumps to discover the queen was guarded twice with East. I could not have finessed, as partner held no trumps. I could not 'coup' the hand, because I could get into dummy only once. I had to give up a trump trick. What was wrong with the bidding?"

Even the best bids and plays sometimes turn out badly. The capricious nature of the cards is such that the best-laid plans of experts go askew. Petulant Lady Luck is the only one who can be blamed for the unhappy outcome of the hand.

It is to her alone C. M. O. should appeal. If he bid optimistically, he also bid well. Some might prefer a jump overcall or a bid of two spades over one on the first round, but whatever the first bid, South must jump to six after his partner's diamond call, gambling that he has the diamond king.

We would have no regrets for losing this slam; C. M. O. would indeed have to be a timid bidder to refuse the golden opportunity it offered.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

IT'S BEGINNING to look as though the American Federation of Government Employes' annual convention in Atlantic City next month will adjourn with Cecil E. Custer as national president.

Several local lodges have indorsed his "candidacy," the latest being the GAO group, which, incidentally, is powerful in conventions. The lodge's slate, as set forth in resolutions, is: Custer for president; Charles T. Hoffman for national treasurer; Berneice B. Heffner for national secretary; Michael D. Schaefer, James G. Yaden and G. Carroll for national vice presidents. But there are others who want the national presidency, at least one in Washington—but whether a fight will be made remains to be seen.

DR. JOHN R. MOHLER, chief, Bureau of Animal Industry, Agriculture Department, will speak today on the American Veterinary Medical Association Day program of the Seventh World's Poultry Congress now being held in Cleveland. He will present the foreign veterinary delegates to the congress . . .

The Agriculture Interbureau Duckpin League will ho'd its annual reorganization meeting on August 15. Meanwhile, applications for teams are being accepted by Emmet C. Scott, league manager, BPI, room 5949 South Building; phone 2912 . . .

Notice in the worthy Agriculture Exchange:

LOST—On Thursday morning, July 20, or Friday, July 21, a small package of miniature color slides. Of greater value to owner than to finder. Reward: a color portrait of the finder.

Judge Bolon B. Turner, member of the Board of Tax Appeals, will address the weekly luncheon of the Federal Bar Association at 12:30 today at the Army and Navy Club, Seventeenth and I streets northwest.

The National Federation of Federal Employes has made special arrangements with the B. & O. Railroad to run an excursion to New York every week-end beginning Friday and continuing until the World's Fair closes. The excursions are not limited to N. F. F. E. members. Henry Nolda is chairman of the trip committees.

AS THE DAY of adjournment draws nearer, most Congressmen are thinking of rest and home; but not Representative Jennings Randolph. The "Mayor of the District" has recently acquired a new crown as Congressional doughnut-dunking champion, and next Tuesday he is due at the New York's World's Fair to receive his prize and judge the boys' and girls' world championship.

The National Dunking Association, organized "to encourage good cheer and fellowship through dunking," will present the West Virginian a huge dunking cup in the Mayflower Court of Dunking. Special ceremonies are planned at the West Virginia Building in the Court of States to honor the returning hero and his new-won laurels.

SHANTIES in Honolulu, rat-ridden hovels in Texas and disease-infested slum tenements in Georgia and Florida have started crashing to the ground before the far-reaching scythe of Nathan Straus, administrator of the United States Housing Authority, it was announced yesterday. In their place will rise 2,298 bright new homes and apartments, light, warm, airy, with the latest in sanitary equipment and handy to schools and playspots.

Approval of base bids totaling $6,370,870 was announced yesterday by USHA for slum clearance and low-rent home construction in Honolulu, T. H.; San Antonio and Brownsville, Tex.; Rome and Macon, Ga., and West Palm Beach, Fla.

Most of the new construction will be on sites now occupied by unsafe and insanitary dwellings, but in West Palm Beach and Honolulu vacant sites outside the city have been chosen. In these cases a corresponding number of homes unfit for human habitation will be torn down in the slum sections.

Holy Name Auxiliary Holds Excursion Today

Holy Name Auxiliary No. 38, of Ladies Auxiliary of the Knights of St. John, will hold its annual summer all-day excursion today on the Wilson Line's City of Washington. Mrs. Emma Panzer is president.

On the arrangements committee are Mrs. Anna Running, Grace Thornett, Mrs. Mary Anderson, Mrs. Estelle Richardson, Mrs. C. M. McAlluster, Miss A. DeMichele, Louise Barber, Margaret Long, Mrs. Bessie Linthicum, Mrs. Emma Knowles and Mrs. Sadie Cannon.

Mallery to Direct Municipal Association

Earl D. Mallery, Washington manager for the American Municipal Association for the past three years, has been appointed national executive director of the association, it was announced yesterday. The association is a federation of State leagues of municipalities.

PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL

THE YEARLING

By Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

Chapter 57

THE FOOD was on long plank tables near the Christmas tree. Grandma Hutto and his mother bore down on him to lend him to it. He found that glory hung about him, too, in a sweet aroma. Women crowded around him and pressed food on him. They, too, asked questions about the hunt. At first he was struck dumb and could not answer. He felt hot and cold and spilled salad from the plate in one hand. The other hand held three varieties of cake.

M. K. Rawlings

Grandma Hutto said, "Now leave him be."

He was suddenly afraid he would not have a chance to answer the questions and would miss the shining triumph of the hour.

He said quickly, "We follered him near about three days. We jumped him twice. We got into mud Pa said would bog a buzzard's shadow, and we wrangled out of it——"

They listened with flattering attention. He was filled with enthusiasm. He began at the beginning and tried to tell it as he thought Penny would do. Half-way through he looked down at the cake. He lost interest in the account.

He crammed a chunk of pound cake in his mouth. The clustered women turned to bring him more sweets.

Ma Baxter said, "Now you begin on cake, you'll not be able to hold nothin' else."

"I don't want nothin' else."

Grandma Hutto said, "Leave him be, Ory. He kin eat cornbread the rest o' the year."

"I'll eat it tomorrer," he promised. "I know you got to have cornbread to grow on."

He went from one kind of cake to another and back again.

He asked, "Ma, did Flag come in 'fore you left?"

"He come in yestiddy at dark. I declare, hit worried me, him comin' in without you. Then Nellie Gin-right was here a while tonight and reported you."

HE LOOKED at her with approval. She was really handsome, he thought, in the black alpaca. Her gray hair was combed smoothly and her cheeks were flushed with her contentment and her pride. The other women addressed her respectfully. It was a great thing, he tought, to be kin to Penny Baxter.

He said, "I got somethin' purty for you, home."

"Have? 'Twouldn't be red and shiny, would it?"

"You found it!"

"You like it?"

"Purty as kin be. I'd of wore it, but I figgered you'd want to give it to me. You want to know what I got for you, or no?"

"Tell me."

"I got a sack o' pep'mint candy. And your Pa made you a deer-leg scabbard for the knife Oliver give you. And he made a buckskin collar for your fawn."

"How'd he do it without me knowin'?"

"When you're oncet asleep, he could put a new roof over you, and you'd not know it."

He sighed with repletion of soul and body. He looked at the remnants of cake in his hands. He thrust them at his mother.

"I don't like it," he said.

"About time."

He looked about at the company and was again stabbed with shyness. Eulalie Boyles was doing a hop-skip-and-jump in a corner with the wordless boy who sometimes ran the ferry. Jody stared from a distance. He would scarcely have known her. She had on a white dress with blue ruffles and blue bows of ribbon swung at the ends of her pig-tails. He was swept with resentment, not of her, but of the ferry-boy. Eulalie in a remote fashion belonged to him, Jody, to do with as he pleased, if only to throw potatoes at her.

The Forresters had formed a group of their own at the end of the church near the door. The bolder of the women had taken them plates of food. To look twice at a Forrester was to invite scandal. The more roistering of the men were with them, and the bottles were going around again. The Forrester voices boomed above the hum of the festivities. The fiddlers went outside and brought in their instruments and began to tune and scrape. A square dance was formed and called. Buck and Mill-wheel and Gabby induced giggling girls to be their partners. Lem frowned from the outskirts. The Forresters made a violent and noisy affair of the dance. Grandma Hutto retired to a far bench. Her black eyes snapped.

"You'd never of got me here, did I know them black devils was comin'."

"Nor me," Ma Baxter said.

THEY SAT STONILY side by side, for once in agreement and harmony. Jody was half-drunk himself with the noise and music, the cake and the excitement. The outside world was cold, but the inside of the church was hot and stuffy with the roaring wood-stove and the heat of the packed and sweating bodies.

A man, a newcomer, entered the door. A cold gust of air followed him, so that every one looked up to see what had brought it. A few noticed that Lem Forrester spoke to him, and the man answered, and Lem said something to his brothers. In a moment the Forresters went out together. The group around Penny had been filled and satisfied with his story of the hunt and was now supplementing it with tales of their own. The square dance continued with a reduced number. Some of the women went to the group of hunters, protesting their absorption. The newcomer was brought to the still-loaded tables for food. He was a traveller who had disembarked from a steamer that had stopped for wood at the river landing.

He said, "I was tellin' the men, ladies, there was other passengers got off here. I reckon you know 'em. Mr. Oliver Hutto and a young lady."

Grandma Hutto stood up.

"You sure o' that name?"

"Why, yes, Ma'am. He said his home was here."

Penny was pushing his way toward her. He took her aside.

He said, "I see you've done had the news. I'm feered the Forresters has gone to your house. I'm fixin' to go there to try to ward off trouble. You want to go? Could be, they'd behave theirselves better was you there to shame 'em."

Ma Baxter said, "Now I'll jest go with you. I'd as soon give them varmints a piece o' my own mind."

Jody trailed behind them. They piled in the Baxter wagon and turned back toward the river. The sky was strangely bright.

Penny said, "Must be a woods fire some'eres. Oh, my God."

The position of the fire was unmistakable. Around the bend of the road, down the lane of oleanders, flames were shooting high into the air. Grandma Hutto's house was burning. They turned into the yard. The house was a bonfire. The flames showed details of the rooms within. Fluff ran to them, his tail between his legs. They jumped down from the wagon.

Grandma called, "Oliver! Oliver!"

"Oliver's there! Oliver! Oliver!"

HE STRUGGLED with her. In the bright light the earth was plain. It was cut and trampled with the hooves of horses. But the Forresters and their mounts were gone.

Penny said, Jody, for the Lord's sake, drive back to Boyles' store and see kin you find somebody seed where Oliver headed when he left the boat. If there's nobody there, go on to the doin's and find out from the stranger."

Jody clambered to the wagon seat and turned Caesar back up the lane. His hands seemed wooden and he fumbled with the reins. He was panicked and could not remember whether his father had told him to go first to the doings or first to the store. If Oliver was alive he would never be unfaithful to him, even in his mind, again. He turned into the road. The winter night was bright with stars. Caesar snorted. A man and woman were walking down the road toward the river. He heard the man laugh.

The woman was Twink Weatherby.

Jody said, "Git in the wagon, quick, Oliver."

"Oliver, Grandma's house is afire. The Forresters done it."

Oliver tossed his bags into the wagon. He lifted Twink and swung her to the seat, then vaulted the wheel and took the reins. Jody scrambled up beside him. Oliver groped with one hand inside his shirt and laid his revolver on the seat.

"The Forresters is gone," Jody said.

Oliver whipped the horse to a trot and turned down the lane. The frame of the house stood revealed around the flames, as though a box inclosed them. Oliver caught his breath.

"Ma wasn't in it?"

"She's yonder."

Oliver stopped the wagon and they climbed down.

He called, "Ma!"

He said, "Easy, there, old lady. Quit tremblin' now. Easy."

Oliver pushed Grandma aside and stared at the house. The roof crashed and a fresh blaze leaped to the moss in the live oaks.

He said, "Which-a-way has the Forresters gone?"

Jody heard Grandma murmur, "Oh, God."

She braced herself.

She said loudly, "Now what in tarnation you want o' the Forresters?"

Bandits Seize Sinai Hospital's $9,900 Pay Roll

Auto Robbed as It Stops Behind Bus; Pursuers Evaded

Three bandits who seized a $9,900 hospital pay roll in a holdup at Baltimore yesterday were sought in Washington last night.

Washington police, joining police of four States in a search for the bandits' light-gray sedan, broadcast a lookout to the metropolitan area, and warned officers to use caution in making an arrest as the men were armed.

The trio took the bimonthly pay roll of Sinai Hospital from Miss Rhea Nusbaum, head bookkeeper, as she rode toward the hospital in a car driven by Charles Zavodny, the Associated Press reported.

Zavodny said the bandits tried to force his car to the curb in front of the Johns Hopkins Hospital entrance. A few blocks farther, Zavodny told police, he had to stop behind a bus which was discharging passengers, and the bandit car drove up beside him.

Two of the bandits, revolvers drawn, stepped up to the hospital car, one on each side. One pointed a gun at Miss Nusbaum and demanded the money which was at her feet in the rear of the car. She handed it over.

Zavodny chased the bandit car for three blocks through heavy traffic, but was forced to stop his car to avoid hitting a small boy who was pulling a toy wagon across the street.

Police said the licenses on the bandit car were found to have been stolen. Description of the bandits also was broadcast to Delaware, Pennsylvania and Virginia.

Miss Nusbaum told officers the two men who forced her to surrender the money were each about 20 years old. The third remained in the bandit car.

An Invitation to Park Free

The dispute between District Commissioners and Sam Lovenbein over operation of the Municipal Center parking lot, at John Marshall place and Constitution avenue northwest, is being fought in court. Meanwhile, Police Edward Nolan and others have been stationed at the lot to distribute to parkers, leaflets advising them not to pay the usual fee. Lovenbein, however, says his old customers are still paying. Two hundred paid $2 each yesterday for parking during August, he said

West Coast Mobilizes Today To Thwart 'Attack' by Bombers

Civilians to Form Vast Observation Network To Report 'Enemy' Planes; Idea Tried Out Here on Minor Scale Nine Years Ago

By Marshall Andrews

Out on the West Coast today the Air Corps will try out something on a large scale it first attempted in a minor way nine years ago in the Capital.

In California, Washington and Oregon, civilians, from rancher to banker, will be mobilized in a vast observation network to spot and report "enemy" aircraft seeking to lay waste important inland points. From their reports, Army men will plot direction and speed of approaching planes and send out swarms of pursuit planes to meet them.

In May, 1930, 38 bombers, attack and pursuit planes from Langley Field, Va., Barksdale Field, La., and Selfridge Field, Mich., fought out exactly the same sort of war between here and Aberdeen, Md., but without civilian co-operation.

Spotting stations manned by soldiers were spread fanwise between Washington and Aberdeen, connected by telephone with Philips Field at the proving grounds. There 20 planes (they had Curtis Hawks in those days) waited the word to go up and stop the enemy when he was located.

Time after time, singly, in flights of three and in squadrons of nine, the enemy bombers and attack ships sought to weave a way through the network and reach Aberdeen unmolested. And, all too frequently they got there.

They hid behind clouds and sneaked past the soldier observers. Bombers imitated attack tactics and hedgehopped in their waddling fashion to drop their imaginary bombs right under the eyes of unwarned pursuit pilots. Attack planes aped the bombers and flew at great altitudes, their single motors confusing observers who expected twin-motored bombers way up there.

But the observers spotted enough attackers and the pursuit got out in time to intercept enough to convince the Air Corps it had something. That little war between Washington and Aberdeen may have laid an egg that has hatched what may be the answer to sudden attack from the air.

Roosevelt Chooses Not to Make a CoolidgeStatement

"I do not choose to run," he was asked whether he cared to make any comment in commemoration of the anniversary. The President laughed uproariously, then inquired whether the questioner meant to imply that he should spend his vacation in the South Dakota Black Hills, where Coolidge issued his declaration.

Mr. Roosevelt said he expected to spend his vacation aboard a destroyer off the Atlantic seaboard and added jokingly that their news dispatches would be subject to his personal censorship.

Senate Approves Plan to Move Relic Of '93 Fair Here

Chicago and lovers of art in the classic tradition won a joint victory yesterday when the Senate passed and sent to the White House a resolution to permit erection of the "Columbian Fountain" in the National Capital.

A show-piece of the Chicago World's Fair of 1893, the "Columbian Fountain" will be executed and moved to Washington through funds to be raised by popular subscription, according to Representative Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, its sponsor.

As the basin will cover a diameter of 150 feet, a large park tract will be required, and a battle reminiscent of the fight over the Thomas Jefferson Memorial may occur due to the antipathy of the so-called school of modern art toward the memorial.
